Rep. Starnes Denies Story Of 'Plot' Against Dies

Fails to Include Hook and Casey as He Exonerates Four At Jackson Dinner

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Acting Chairman Starnes of the Dies Committee took the House floor at 11 o'clock last night to deny a report that certain members of Congress had engaged in a "plot" against the committee.

Denouncing the allegations as "wholly inaccurate and untrue," Starnes specifically exonerated four of the six Representatives who attended a dinner last month at the home of Gardner Jackson, avowed opponent of the Dies committee.

Starnes explained that three of the Reprseentatives concerned had appeared before an executive session of the Dies Committee yesterday morning and asserted that at the dinner party they had merely discussed the work of the committee.

The three said they advised against use of documents purportedly linking Chairman Dies to the Silver Shirt leader, William Dudley Pelley, Starnes declared. These documents, which Starnes described as "forgeries," were subsequently presented to Congress by Representative Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, one of the guests at Jackson's house.

Hook Refuses to Appear

The four members whom Starnes specifically exonerated from any "collusion" were Representatives Ramspeck, of Georgia; Larrabee, of Indiana; Coffee, of Washington, and Murdock, of Utah, (Democrats). All but Murdock, who is out of town, testified at yesterday's executive session of the committee.

The fifth Representative is Hook, who refused to appear before the committee because, he said, he feared he might "again be framed;" and the sixth at the Jackson dinner was Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, a member of the committee.

At the conclusion of Starnes' speech—which pointedly failed to include Hook and Casey in the exoneration—Casey demanded to know "whether in the future it will be necessary for members of Congress invited out to dinner to obtain the consent of the Dies committee."

Asks About Grand Jury Probe

Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, asked if Starnes intended to present the "forgeries" to a grand jury for investigation; but Starnes only replied that "the case is not yet entirely closed, and when it is—probably next week—that question will have to be determined by the committee."

Meanwhile, Representative Hook indicated he was awaiting a report from the Justice Department on whether the documents he put in the Congressional Record actually are forgeries. If the department says they are, he will ask leave to withdraw them—a move which Representative Keefe (Republican), of Wisconsin, blocked on Thursday.

Recalling the fact that David Mayne, the man who originally produced the documents, was at one time in the employ of the Dies Committee, Hook suggested that "if the Dies Committee relied on Mayne, why shouldn't I?"

Hook asserted that he had seen a facsimile of a letter in which Rhea Whitley, Dies Committee counsel who recently resigned, asked Mayne

Byrnes Drops Opposition To Hazen

Commissioners Pledge Trial of Carolinian Demoted as Policeman

The District Commissioners yesterday prepared to conduct a civilian board trial of two police privates demoted last fall from detective sergeants, following a Capitol conference at which Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, agreed to withdraw an objection to confirmation of the reappointment of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Corporation Counsel Seal was instructed to prepare charges against Hubert (Steve) Brodie and Leo Murray, the demoted sergeants, in order that they might be given the trial requested by Brodie "to clear my name." Oliver Gasch, assistant corporation counsel, was designated to prosecute the case.

Senator Byrnes said he would not object to Hazen's confirmation when the Senate reconvenes Tuesday and indicated he would take no interest in the Brodie case now that a hearing has been granted.

Commissioner Hazen readily agreed to the trial at a conference held in the office of Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, and attended by Senator Byrnes, Seal, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Police Lieut. Earl Hartman and Assistant United States Attorney John Wilson.

Byrnes explained after the parley that his only interest in the case

Senators Deplete Bad Books Kept To Shock Them

Representative George W. Gillie (Republican), of Indiana, who has a library of naughty magazines which he has been circulating around the Capitol in support of his bill to discourage obscene publications, complained yesterday that the demand on his library was such that it is rapidly disintegrating."

Most effective bit of "literature" in his collection, from the standpoint of winning support for the bill, is a luridly-illustrated article on "Lobby Mistresses." The story deals with the activities of a group of gay maidens, supposedly the tools of paid lobbyists, who use their charms to influence Representatives and Senators.

The Gillie bill, now awaiting action in the Senate, would discourage the publication of lewd magazines by forcing their owners and editors to reveal themselves to public scorn.

Home for Aged Fire-Trap, Says D'Alesandro

Shocked on Inspection; First Lady Agrees to Meet Inquiry Group

"Conditions at the Blue Plains Home for Aged and Infirm are deplorable. The buildings are fire traps," Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, said after a surprise visit to the institution yesterday.

It was learned that the Congressman was shocked to find 25 persons in one dormitory using a single bathroom, and to discover that only four nurses attended 128 patients in the institution hospital.

Pressed for further details, the chairman of the public health subcommittee of the House District Committee declined to elaborate his findings until he had an opportunity to report to the subcommittee.

Sees Receiving Home

D'Alesandro also inspected the Children's Receiving Home following receipt of a letter from Mrs. Roosevelt, who has sharply criticized conditions at both institutions. He revealed that Mrs. Roosevelt had agreed to meet the members of the subcommittee which is to investigate the institutions, "in the very near future."

D'Alesandro would not say whether she had agreed to appear before the subcommittee to testify or was merely going to meet the members in a conference.

Taking officials of the welfare institutions by surprise, D'Alesandro made a complete tour of the Blue Plains buildings and the receiving home and talked with inmates. He took the names of many of the old persons and indicated he might call them before the subcommittee to testify when hearings begin next week.

Officials at the Home for the Aged and Infirm told D'Alesandro that there were 700 inmates and 58 em-

Finns Smash 'Chute Corps, Tank Attack

Rolling Forts Push Ironclad Sleds Up To Line in Cover Of Smoke Screen

By Wade Werner.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, Feb. 2.—A bizarre and mighty Red Army onslaught "in the shape of things to come" tonight sent parachute troops, strange, steel-roofed sledges and smoke-screen laying tanks against the unyielding defenses of the Mannerheim Line.

The second day of this attack was directed at Viipuri, an objective 20 miles distant, which the Soviet army has been unable to reach in nine weeks of war.

Many of the parachute troops, dropped in coveys from dozens of planes, were picked off in the air by sharpshooters or machine-gun fire. Those who landed behind the Finnish lines became separated from their fellow soldiers, stumbled about and began shooting wildly, only to be captured or killed by the Finns.

They carried automatic rifles to the ground with them.

While this ill-fated aerial expedition was being disposed of, dozens of Russian tanks again began moving toward the Finnish lines from the Soviet positions at Summa, the apex of a triangle on the western Karelian Isthmus formed by that town, the Gulf of Finland and Viipuri, Finland's second city.

Shells Halt Tanks

The larger tanks pushed armored sledges ahead of them. They were about 10 feet long and 6 feet wide, protected from above and on the sides by heavy metal plating. Machine-gunners filled the sledges, protecting both the tanks and closely packed infantry which followed.

On the flanks, smaller tanks heaved rapidly across the snows, billowing smoke columns through which the troops sought to maneuver.

Finnish antitank guns stopped most of the armored sledges and, from concealed positions, they said they repulsed the other measures of attack.

There was no estimate of casualties.

More than a score of civilians were killed today in a series of severe Russian air raids on southern Finland.

Pori, on the southwest coast, was one of the centers heaviest hit with 10 dead and dozens wounded there. One person was killed at Rauma, also on the southwest coast.

Church Is Hit

Several were killed at Pieksaemaki and heavy damage was inflicted on Kotka and Kuopio, ports on the Gulf of Finland. One church was badly damaged by the raiders.

A number of Red Army bombers were shot down just outside Helsinki.

At Pori one bomb fell squarely through a Red Cross painted on the roof of an eight-story hospital. Heavy casualties were avoided because a number of patients had made their way into a basement bomb shelter before the attack.

Hundreds of incendiary and high explosive bombs were dropped

Yugoslavs, Greeks And Turks Reject Plea at Outset of Entente Conference

Associated Press Staff Writer

Belgrade, Feb. 2.—Worried Rumania, squeezed between strong demands by Germany and the Allies for the lion's share of her oil, tonight was reported reliably to have lost her chances of winning guarantees of automatic support from her neighbors in the Balkan Entente.

After their first meeting behind closed doors, the foreign ministers of Rumania, Turkey and Yugoslavia and the premier of Greece were understood to have decided formally that there would be no change in the present entente.

Observers said this meant that the representatives of Yugoslavia, Turkey and Greece definitely had refused Rumania's request for automatic help in the case of an attack by Germany or Russia.

Plan to Improve Trade

However, the conferees were reported to have decided to enlarge economic contact between the four nations and to try to maintain economic relations with the belligerent powers on a prewar basis. This was an attempt to prevent being flattened between the conflicting demands of Germany and Russia on the one hand and France and Britain on the other.

Informed sources said that Germany was bringing pressure on Rumania to accept a sweeping plan to make Rumania's industries, petroleum production and agriculture affiliates of the Reich's economic structure.

The entente representatives—Foreign Ministers Grigore Gafencu of Rumania, Sukru Saracoglu of Turkey and Aleksander Cincar-Markovic of Yugoslavia, and Premier General John Metaxas of Greece—ran into immediate difficulties in their quest for a Balkan peace formula.

They were reported on high authority to have "agreed to disagree" immediately on their individual plans for keeping peace in southeastern Europe.

Stress Desire for Peace

While ruling against any change in the entente, they decided they would issue a communique stressing their "will" to settle all questions with their neighbors in a friendly manner and without force.

This decision apparently also was made without Rumania's full consent. It meant that Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey apparently feel that peace would best be preserved if Rumania would attempt to reach a friendly settlement of territorial claims by Hungary and Bulgaria.

With or without Gafencu's assent, the other conferees also agreed that Yugoslavia was free to make a friendship pact with Hungary, which is pressing her claims on Rumania for the return of Transylvania, Hungarian territory which went to Rumania in a post-World War settlement.

Foreign observers said the meeting of the ministers fully confirmed expectations that the divergent interests of these four nations gave little hope of concrete accomplishments.

Army Orders Laggard Officers Ousted From Reserve Corps

Many Have Neglected Training And Would Cause Chaos in War, Chiefs Say; Fourth in D. C. Affected

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Officials revealed yesterday that a Nation-wide combing out of the Army Reserve Corps had been launched in a move to whip the country's "second line of defense" into instant readiness.

Thousands of reserve officers who have failed to carry out regular training assignments will be relieved from their regimental or other duties and be replaced by more active officers, it was said.

A recent review of war plans by Army chiefs revealed what many deemed a serious flaw in the program. They found that practically all reserve regiments had many officers assigned who rarely take part in weekly conferences, correspondence work, week-end drills and summer training.

As the units are expected to begin immediately to function upon mobilization, officials hold that peacetime training should be conducted at full strength and with all officers present at regular drills. Otherwise, they hold, confusion would reign when skeletonized units began recruiting and training the men such officers would lead into battle.

New regulations just issued by the War Department direct the relief of the delinquent officers and their ultimate discharge from the service.

Sugar Benefits Are Restored but Loans To Farm Tenants Are Voted Down

Roosevelt Displeased

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT severely criticized Congressional cuts in his farm budget and insisted the amount he had asked would be "barely sufficient."—Page 2.

The House's Action

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House last night romped defiantly over Presidential warnings, and ordered a $66,929,263 below-budget slash in the farm bill.

Passage of the riddled measure came in a dramatic night session test of economy sentiment. With one major exception, economy lines held solidly to the 11 p. m. showdown.

Working under the combined fire of President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace, the House turned back a concerted farm bloc attack and approved reductions of more than $500,000,000 under current year farm spending.

Republicans Satisfied

Satisfied with the cuts, Republicans in the end offered only a routine recommit motion to trim the measure another million. This was defeated. By a voice vote the bill was passed and sent to the Senate.

Claiming Administration backing, tumultuously resentful farm members salvaged only $47,500,000 in Sugar Act benefits and a minor $126,000 increase for dry farming experiments in the prolonged night session battle.

Held to $713,995,256 in direct appropriations by a determined economy stand, the bill as passed and sent to the Senate was $87,626,000 over the drastically cut bill recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

A Republican point of order against REA borrowing from the RFC resulted in one $40,000,000 increase in the total of the bill.

Representative Taber (Republican) of New York, objected to the RFC lending provision. The bill carried $40,000,000 for REA, and the result was the money was directly appropriated.

The farm bloc made its last major stand on a $25,000,000 demand for the farm tenancy program. It was beaten down by a 135 to 149 teller vote, although Speaker Bankhead took the floor in defense of the increase. Chairman Jones, of the Agriculture Committee, co-author of the tenant program, burst into tears as he pleaded with members not to completely stop the tenant program.

The farm bloc's single major victory, restoration of Sugar Act benefits, had the final consent of the Appropriations subcommittee.

Cut Through Misunderstanding

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, bill manager, explained that his subcommittee ordered the sugar cut under a "misunderstanding." The sugar benefits are financing by processing taxes and more than pay their own way. The House approved the $47,500,000 restoration, 85 to 43.

The budget slashers won on all other tests, despite the President's Hyde Park complaint that the cuts were terrific, and Wallace's charge of "scuttling" the program.

Lost on a technical point of order was the big sum of $72,678,812 for farm surplus disposal and expansion of the Administration food

Garner Tells George He Will File in Georgia

Favors Primary Which New Dealers Indicated Would Not Be Called

By the Associated Press

Vice President Garner, in a challenge to New Deal forces in Georgia, President Roosevelt's "other boss," last night came out in favor of a Presidential preference primary there and announced he would enter his name in it.

The pro-New Deal Georgia Governor, E. D. Rivers, has suggested that the State send an uninstructed delegation to the Democratic National Convention, and all indications have been that the State executive committee of the party would call no primary.

Garner declared the "people should decide" and asserted he desired "at the proper time to enter my name in the Georgia primary."

In addition, Garner's close associates said he certainly would file in the Ohio primary if Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, did not seek the delegation as a favorite son candidate. Donahey said he was not yet ready to make known his plans, but that he would make a statement soon.

A group of Georgia political leaders started a campaign yesterday to force the holding of a primary. This group is headed by Edgar B. Dunlap, who was campaign manager for Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, when the latter won renomination in 1938 over opposition

Doctor Examines 10 'Stalins;' Sure Real One Is Ill

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 2 (INS).—Ten "Stalins" live in Moscow, and two of those ten have high blood pressure!

This astonishing fact was revealed tonight in a letter from Dr. F. H. Mosse, English surgeon, who wrote that Dr. K. Wenckebach, an Amsterdam heart specialist, was summoned to Moscow to give Joseph Stalin a physical examination.

Dr. Wenckebach found ten practically identical Stalins lined up for the examination. Two showed high blood pressure symptoms. Which, if any, was the real Stalin could not be learned positively.

The elabroate artifice surrounding the examination plainly was to keep any bad news concerning Stalin's health from "leaking out."

Bi-Lingual Macaw Woos Speechless Polly in 2 Tongues

Valentina, a local-born macaw, who wants to be a good neighbor, sits on her perch in the sun-flooded court of the Pan-American Union Building these days and tries to scream Spanish.

The volume is fine, but the accent she is awful. Valentina cannot speak Spanish. She cannot even speak English. But Valentina she keep on trying. The snow outside does not bother her, for her eyes feast on palm leaves and banana trees.

What does hurt Valentina, though, is that her perch mate—a green macaw from Brazil—can speak Spanish. Also, this David can speak English.

"Hello," "Amigo," Senorita," "Hello," he hurls across the patio to prove it. "Hello," he calls to Chief Clerk William Griffin. "Hello," he yells to tourists.

Poor Valentina. Her feathers are blue. They got her at the Zoo, and she knows nary a language. What is more, she is handicapped by a good disposition.

David is a veritable Barrymore, who can snarl, snap or strut. He was born a gentleman, and cusses when he feels like it. Why, there is that terrible tale about the way he bit the head of that red macaw before Valentina. He hastened her death, they say.

Now, the half-million tourists who come by the Union Building to see the birds each year do not know all this. They see just two bright macaws and hear them making noise among the palm trees.

Valentina herself gets so discouraged about her vowels and consonants she feels like giving up. And would, too, but she cannot forget what Secretary Hull said about being a good neighbor, Poor Valentina.

Legion Bridge, Oyster Roast Open Drive for Blood Bank

The first of several hundred parties and benefit bridges this month for the Children's Hospital blood bank fund were held last night.

Two American Legion groups celebrated their "bank nights," that patients of Children's Hospital may have a better chance for speedy recovery. They were Sergt. Jasper Auxiliary Unit, No. 13, which held a benefit bridge at the home of Mrs. Frank J. O'Connor, 5400 Nebraska avenue northwest, and Potomac Post, No. 40, which sponsored an oyster roast in Our Lady of Victory Parish Hall.

Receipts from these entertainments, as well as from the hundreds of other benefits scheduled in The Post-WJSV blood campaign, will go to Children's Hospital in their entirety. Last year $2,500 was raised for the institution in the same manner.

Other developments yesterday included announcement of the membership of the drive's ladies' committee, of which Mrs. Winslow B. Van Devanter and Mrs. Laurence H. Green are cochairmen; the fixing of dates for several other American Legion parties and announcement of benefits to be held in Colonial Village and Arlington Village.

The arrangements committee for last night's Potomac Post party consisted of Commander Alexander McKinnon, Past Commander G. E. Wells, J. A. Ager, Fred D. Schaefer and J. P. Trainor.

Several post members announced their willingness to volunteer as donors for the "bank" if the need should arise.

Meantime, the women of the post's auxiliary unit revealed plans for a benefit bridge February 18 in the

Frigid Blasts Put an End To Hopes of Mild Weather

A blustering "March wind," a month ahead of schedule, swept into the Capital and across the Central Atlantic States yesterday, banishing hopes that brilliant sunshine would bring an end to the midwinter cold wave.

More of the same is expected today, with the weatherman forecasting continued cold weather, fair skies, and moderate to fresh northwest winds. "Not quite so cold" is the prediction for tomorrow.

Thermometers, which stood at 38 degrees at midnight Thursday, plunged to 18 at 10 o'clock last night, and the Weather Bureau predicted the mercury would drop to 14 degrees this morning. There were snow flurries here during the day.

Tradition routed a bleary-eyed groundhog from his burrow at the Washington Zoo for his annual February 2 prediction on the continuance of winter. The beast fled immediately for shelter, whether from his shadow or the cold, "experts" are debating.

Those injured in accidents on the ice yesterday included:

Mary J. Boyd, 80, of 1369 Newton street northwest; Emma Colvin, 43, of 960 Shepherd street northwest; Elinore Awkard, 42, of 1219-A Carrollburg place southwest; Marie Brown, 8, of 207 Virginia avenue southeast; A. J. Jacobs, 48, 134 F street southeast; Dorothy Allen, 35, of 733 Sixth street southeast; Catherine Johnson, 25, of 1745 S street northwest; Helen Lacey, 40, of 2110 Tenth street northwest.

Marshall Buck, 16, of 2525 Third street northeast, suffered arm and hip injuries when his sled ran into a taxicab at Third and Bryant streets northeast.

Pictures of The Graduates

Promotion day yesterday brought Washington's 90,000 public school pupils to the end of the first half of the school year.

Exercises in those junior and senior high schools that had not held programs Thursday raised the total of boys and girls getting dipolmas to more than 3,000.

The remaining thousands—enrolled in grades ranging from kindergarten through the sixth—were promoted in less formal exercises.

Roosevelt Joins in Fight Of Farm Bloc

Calls $900,000,000 'Barely Sufficient' For Rural Program

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., Feb. 2.—Reemphasizing that a $900,000,000 farm program would be "barely sufficient," President Roosevelt took the side of the House farm bloc today in its fight to restore to the agriculture appropriation bill at least a part of a $154,000,000 cut made by the Appropriations Committee.

The 20 per cent slice which the committee took from the amount recommended for Federal farm activities was the biggest reduction yet made in the President's "rock bottom" budget. And Mr. Roosevelt plainly did not like it.

He read reporters excerpts from his budget message, which he had had typed in advance of a press conference, and said he was standing on his budget. The House Appropriations Committee, he said, had made perfectly terrific cuts.

Veto Not Mentioned

One pertinent excerpt said: "I do not believe that the majority of people feel that the agricultural program should be reduced below the figure of $900,000,000 because this figure, in itself a large reduction below the current year, will be barely sufficient to carry out soil protection and surplus removal operations."

While Mr. Roosevelt made no direct threat of a veto should the appropriation bill be kept far below the budget estimates, some individuals around the temporary White House got the idea that the Administration at least would do its utmost to get Congress to wipe out the reductions made by the House committee.

But such an effort, they said, might lead to more controversy, since economy advocates were hoping to trim appropriations sufficiently to make it unnecessary either to levy $460,000,000 of new taxes or to raise the $45,000,000,000 limit on the public debt.

Mr. Roosevelt asked for the taxes to finance emergency expenditures for defense and enforcement of the Neutrality Act.

To some legislators who disliked the idea either of levying more taxes or boosting the debt limit in an election year, reductions in appropriations looked good.

But the President, referring to the broad categories into which he had divided his budget, recited another part of his budget message in which he said he was "satisfied that no lower figures can be attained except at the expense of impairing the efficiency with which laws are administered or of working undue hardship upon individuals or economic groups."

He added that he refused to accept the responsibility of adopting either alternative.

Plans Quiet Week-End

Again he used a portion of his budget message to stress a contention that the Nation must "avoid the danger of too drastic or too sudden a curtailment of Government support" in guarding gains already made and in pressing toward employment for persons dislaced by machines and the 5,000,000 net who have been added to the labor force since 1929.

The President himself raised the question of farm appropriations at a press conference held in the library of his home here shortly after he arrived from Washington for a week-end stay.

With a new snow powdering the countryside, Mr. Roosevelt said he expected to spend the days quietly, getting a lot of sleep and looking over a lot of books.

While he nimbly sidestepped efforts to get him to discuss politics and international affairs, he said he was keeping constantly in touch with Washington and that he expected to be back in the Capital Tuesday to greet members of the Democratic National Committee.

Garner to Seek Georgia Backing

of President Roosevelt.

In a letter to Senator George yesterday, Garner asserted:

"The people should decide and the candidate (for the Democratic Presidential nomination) should be selected at primaries and conventions as provided by law."

George had written Garner that many of his constituents had inquired as to whether the Vice President would seek Georgia's delegates in a preferential primary.

Replying, Garner wrote:

"I understand that the established custom of the Democratic Party in your State is that in Presidential years a preferential primary is held for the purpose of permitting the people to express their choice for the Presidential nominee. I think this precedent in Georgia is the democratic procedure.

"As you know, I have heretofore announced that I will accept the nomination for President but I will make no effort to control any delegates. . . .

"Will you please advise me regarding the time and procedure for filing in Georgia, and give me the names of the proper officials of the party to contact?"

George said it "has been the long-established custom in Georgia to have a primary, thus permitting the people to express their choice for the Presidential nominee, and I assume that this Democratic precedent will not be abrogated this year."

Garner's friends said he had entered or would enter primaries in Wisconsin, California and Oregon.

The decision as to whether a Georgia primary shall be held is up to the State executive committee. George told reporters he had "no information at all" as to whether the committee would call a primary.

He said that although a primary had been customary in election years, the committee could fail to call one.

Dewey Prospects Boosted

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 2 (AP).—The New York State Republican committee unanimously appoved today its executive committee's selection of eight delegates at large to the party's national convention, seven of whom are regarded favorable to the Presidential candidacy of Manhattan Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey.

Eighty-four district delegates will be chosen at the April 2 primary election.

Dean Garrison Urges Labor Board Be Relieved Of Job of Settling C.I.O.-A.F.L. Squabbles

Thinks Rows Imperil Public Confidence In Wagner Law

A proposal to amend the Wagner Act in one important respect was offered to the Smith Committee investigating the NLRB yesterday by one of the Labor Board's own witnesses, Dean Lloyd K. Garrison, of the University of Wisconsin Law School.

Dean Garrison suggested that the board be "relieved" of the necessity of determining the appropriate bargaining unit in cases where the A. F. L. and C. I. O. are in conflict.

J. Warren Madden, chairman of the board, succeeded Garrison on the stand, and at the end of the day, Representative Smith asked him what he thought of Garrison's proposal.

"I can't tell if my inclination to agree with Dean Garrison," replied Madden with a weary smile, "arises out of inspiration or exhaustion."

Garrison, who was chairman of the old National Relations Board in 1934, also urged that trial examiners of all Federal administrative agencies, including the NLRB, be appointed independently of the agency that ultimately decides the case, and be given higher pay. Their pay now is "much too low to get the kind of men we want," he said.

The trial examiner, whose function is to hear witnesses and make recommendations to the board for final decision, should be employes of an "independent agency of Government," Garrison said.

Such an innovation would answer the objection that Federal administrative agencies as now constituted are at one and the same time judge, jury and prosecutor, the witness declared. He said, however, that he was opposed to "singling out the National Labor Relations Board for special treatment."

Atmosphere of Tension

Asserting that the board had "done a job for which it deserves public gratitude," Garrison pointed out that it has had to work "in an atmosphere of tension and controversy more severe than that which has afflicted any other agency, and to pioneer in a brand new field of law."

Madden took the stand to give the board's defense of matters that had perviously been brought out by Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland.

He declared that it was "entirely proper" for Board Secretary Nathan Witt to confer with C. I. O. representatives at the time of the little steel strike in 1937, prior to the filing of charges agains the employers.

"Constant Practice"

It is the "constant practice" of the board and its agents to advise employes as to their rights and how to proceed with charges, Madden explained, adding that the Interstate Commerce Commission, the small claims branch of the District Municipal Court and the United States Employes Compensation Commission follow similar procedure.

The remark of Mrs. Dore Herrick, NLRB regional director in New York, that two of the board's special investigators followed methods reminiscent of the OGPU was disputed by Madden. He said the work of those agents had "not the slightest resemblance to anything approaching any secret service or OGPU."

In another case, Mrs. Herrick committed a "gross blunder" and earned a "very severe reprimand," said the witness. This was when she attended a dinner in March, 1939, which was given by a New York industrialist. Mrs. Herrick "went there to make friends and instead she earned their suspicion and contempt," commented Madden.

Director Fired

The same dinner resulted in the dismissal of James Miller, then regional director at Cleveland, Madden said. Miller (who testified against the board some weeks ago) allegedly went to New York to attend the dinner at the expense either of a Cleveland attorney who had several cases before the board, or of his clients, said Madden.

Dean Garrison reminded the committee that when the Supreme Court upheld the Wagner Act in 1937, the board had "to create very hastily a greatly enlarged staff and to work under tremendous pressure which has not yet abated."

In answer to criticism of the youth and inexperience of the board's review attorneys, Garrison declared that their work comprises "the kind of a job which a young lawyer just out of law school can competently perform, provided he has brains and accurate habits of work." The board's review attorneys "are of that caliber," Garrison added.

Referring to the success of the British in meeting the problem of industrial relations, Garrison urged an expansion of the conciliation service of the Department of Labor as well as the creation of local labor boards composed of representatives of industry, the unions and the public.

The problem of determining the appropriate bargaining unit in A. F. L.-C. I. O. disputes is one that cannot be met by the Labor Board, courts or Congress, said Garrison.

"Attempts to lay down formulas by law will fail," he predicted, suggesting that disputes of this type must be fought out in the labor movement itself. Garrison declared that his proposal would not "seriously" impair progress toward industrial peace and would save the board from the necessity of handling cases which make its task "so critically difficult and which weaken the support given to the law itself."

Boland Plans House Poll on Trade Program

Calls Whip Meeting Tuesday; 10 Members Testify on Effects

By the Associated Press

Representative Boland (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, the Democratic whip, is about to poll the House to determine what reception awaits the Administration's program for renewal of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

Boland called a meeting of his whips' committee Tuesday when he will outline his plans.

"Most important," he said, "is to pass this just as Secretary Hull wants it. We can't have a lot of amendments that are liable to nullify the whole program."

The House Ways and Means Committee heard a preview of the floor debate on the program yesterday when ten Congressmen testified on the resolution to extend it for three years.

Much of the testimony concerned the alleged effect on particular articles, but two Massachusetts Republicans, Representatives Gifford and Bates, attacked the whole program and demanded that the agreements be subject to Senate approval.

Several Democratic Congressmen criticized the pact with Venezuela, contending it was a threat to the United States oil industry, and asked that any extension of the act clearly exclude excise taxes from consideration when agreements are negotiated.

They included Representatives Boren (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Beckworth (Democrat), of Texas, and Ferguson (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Considerable debate developed between Congressmen who were testifying and those on the committee.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, and Representative Bates shouted at one another for nearly an hour in a discussion of the tariff on shoes. Doughton said at one point that he could not "engage in a hollering match," but was willing to debate the facts and figures.

After Beckworth's plea for protection of the oil market, Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, commented he had noted that all of the special interests were being given attention.

"I am satisfied," he told Beckworth, "that there will be enough log rolling on the Democratic side to take care of oil. You can go about your business. You will be taken care of."

A. F. L. Brands Hitler, Stalin Enemies of All

Council Urges U. S. Do All to Aid Finns Neutrality Permits

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 2.—The American Federation of Labor denounced Hitler and Stalin as "enemies of mankind" today and warned that "as long as their creed of totalitarianism rules in Germany and Russia, the peace of the world is in jeopardy."

Speaking through its executive council, the federation condemned what it called "Soviet-Nazi imperialism," and offered all possible assistance to the "victims of racial and religious persecution in Europe." The Federal Government was urged to "do everything it can, without endangering American neutrality, to help Finland resist Soviet aggression."

The federation's spokesmen also "repudiated all attempts to Sovietize American labor" and refused to have "any traffic with Communist agents."

"Unfortunately," the federation stated, "a large number of open and secret members of the Communist Party have established themselves in control of labor organizations affiliated with the dual movement outside the American Federation of Labor."

President William Green listed several unions as either "strongly influenced" or "absolutely controlled" by Communists. These were the maritime and automobile workers' unions, longshoremen, fur workers, transport and vegetable and cannery workers, office workers, the county and municipal government employes' union and the American Newspaper Guild.

The labor body listed Belgium, The Netherlands and the Scandinavian countries as the probable "next intended victims" of Germany and Russia.

Contending that "Stalin formerly posed as a friend of democracy" and that "Hitler once masqueraded as the foe of communism," the federation claimed the Stalin-Hitler pact has "exposed the shameful hypocrisy and falsehood of these pretensions."

"Despite Germany's seizure of Poland and Soviet Russia's invasion of Poland," the federation declared, "both Hitler and Stalin still persist in trying to make us believe they want peace. They still insist they are the innocent victims of the 'imperialistic' democracies of Europe. We in America know otherwise."

Browder Wins Right to Run For Congress

Court Denies Pleas to Keep Name Off Ballot Because of Conviction

New York, Feb. 2.—Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party in America, who was sentenced recently to serve four years in the Federal Penitentiary for passport fraud, won the right today in Supreme Court to have his name placed on the ballot in the special election Tuesday in the Fourteenth Congressional District to select a Representative to succeed the late William I. Sirovitch.

Browder's Communist nomination in the race was ruled valid by Justice J. Sidney Bernstein, who denied the motions of John J. O'Connor, former Democratic Representative from the Sixteenth District, and Lambert Fairchild, former alderman, both of whom contended that Browder had no right to have his name on the ballot because the Communist Party is dedicated to the overthrow of democratic American government.

The Board of Elections, at a special meeting today, removed the only remaining obstacle to Browder's nomination when it dismissed O'Connor's and Fairchild's objections to alleged irregularities in the Browder nominating petitions.

In his decision Justice Bernstein pointed out that under the Constitution there are only three qualifications for a Representative, that he be at least 25 years old, that he shall have been a citizen for at least seven years at the time of his candidacy, and that he be an inhabitant of the State in which he is chosen.

Concerning a contention that Browder's passport conviction constituted a bar to his candidacy under section 310 of the penal law of the State, Justice Bernstein ruled this section concerns imprisonment in a State Prison only and that if it was stretched to include a Federal punishment, a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment would result.

Larger, Longer Job Insurance Benefits Urged

Security Board Tells Congress Many States Could Pay More

Larger unemployment insurance benefits, urged by the leadership of both the A. F. L. and C. I. O., were indorsed yesterday by the Social Security Board.

The agency told Congress in its annual report that the States, especially those where income from jobless insurance taxes exceeds benefit expenditures, should give "serious and continued consideration" to increasing amount and duration of the payments.

The payments are governed by State laws and range from $2 to $18. In a few States, jobless wage earners covered by the program may obtain benefits for as long as 20 and 26 weeks. In most States payments run from 12 to 16 weeks.

"The provisions which now prevail under most State laws," the board said, "express the necessary conservation of standards set when only tentative estimates were available with respect to the amounts that would be collected and expended under State laws."

The board expressed the opinion that no tax yielding less than 2.7 per cent of pay rolls should be considered.

It also said experience had indicated feasibility of revising the system to take in employes of small firms. At present it covers only employers of eight or more workers.

The board also pointed to what it called a "serious deficiency" in scope of the whole social security program.

"Benefits," it said, "are payable to unemployed workers who are well and able to work but not to those . . . who are unemployed because they are sick and for that reason are probably in more serious need."

stamp relief plan. Withdrawn under threat of defeat was an unbudgeted $225,000,000 for continuance of farm parity payments.

The farm bloc battle will be transferred to the Senate, where Chairman Russell, of the Senate Agriculture subcommittee, announced he would urge enactment of parity payments.

Battle Is Sharp

Repeatedly, House economy forces led by Representative Cannon and Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, clashed in floor debate with farm bloc leaders.

Woodrum declared the President inspired the move to cut expenses and had asked Congress "to help him reduce the deficit." At almost the same moment the President was quoted from Hyde Park as criticizing the reductions.

Representative Cooley (Democrat), of North Carolina, read reports of the President's interview and Mr. Roosevelt's budget message injunction to "avoid the danger of too drastic or too sudden a curtailment of Government support."

The President's admonition was ignored. Once the Sugar Act was rescued, Representative Jones vainly attempted to adjourn the House and force further consideration over to Monday. The House refused to go along, 60 to 104.

In 11 hours of continuous session, the House:

Rejected, 109 to 105, amendment by Representative Ferguson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, to increase soil improvement funds from $17,965,750 to $20,000,000.

Defeated two subsequent efforts to increase soil conservation funds by a smaller amount.

Defeated, 87 to 121, a motion by Jones to add $500,000 more for farm water facilities.

Turned back, 47 to 68, amendment by Representative Kleberg (Democrat), of Texas, to increase bollworm eradication funds from $526,000 to $1,326,800.

Efforts to cut the bill below committee figures also were rejected. Representative Boren (Democrat), of Oklahoma, failed 98 to 102 to trim funds for the marketing news services from $1,100,000 to $600,000. A Republican motion to lop $50,000 from the Warehouse Act fund likewise failed 57 to 81.

Restoration of the $72,678,812 appropriation for farm surplus disposal and the food stamp plan, the committee's biggest single cut in the bill, was blocked by a point of order by Representative Cannon. The amendment was offered by Representative Pace (Democrat), of Georgia.

Pace had another amendment to add the controversial $225,000,000 for farm parity payments, but decided not to buck the House economy tide, and withheld it.

As farm bloc leaders piled coals on the heads of Appropriations Committee chiefs, Representative Woodrum asked:

"Whose idea is it that we ought to try to cut down public expenditures and put reason and logic and sanity into our appropriation work?"

He declared it was the President's, and read from Mr. Roosevelt's 1932 Pittsburgh speech in which he said deficit financing had contributed to the economic ills of that period.

"What was true seven years ago is doubly true today, because the National debt is higher," said Woodrum. "We are up against the National debt ceiling. The President recognizes that it is true, because he has brought a budget here and asked Congress to help him to reduce the deficit this year to $2,000,000,000."

The Virginian declared the relief budget had been cut nearly 50 per cent and in view of that fact "it is not right to say that all of the cut is being put upon agriculture," he said.

"There have been no cuts in this bill that are going to affect seriously the fundamental problem we ought to be dealing with, and that is to try to put agriculture on an economically sound basis."

Short Wheat Crop Forecast Despite Snow

Production Expected To Be 60,000,000 Bu. Below Consumption

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Despite the snow blanket which a severe winter has spread over the Great Plains, the Agriculture Department is looking for a 1940 wheat crop of 60,000,000 to 80,000,000 bushels less than the amount normally consumed at home and exported.

This is due to the severe fall drought which combined with previous dry weather to rob the subsoil of moisture. As a result of the dryest fall on record, one-third of the winter wheat acreage was abandoned.

The snow, of course, will not help the abandoned acreage, but it will protect the growing wheat against cold and will provide a certain amount of moisture. At any rate, farmers in Kansas and other Great Plains States have been jubilant over the snowfall.

No Prospect of Shortage

Agriculture Department officials expect a winter wheat crop of 400,000,000, much below normal, and a spring wheat crop of 200,000,000 bushels, which would be substantially above normal. A 600,000,000-bushel crop would be 112,000,000 bushels below average annual production.

There is no prospect, however, of a shortage of wheat. The wheat carryover, the department estimates, will be 300,000,000 bushels July 1. If 1940 crop estimates are borne out, the carryover on July 1, 1941, still will be in excess of 200,000,000 bushels.

J. B. Kincer, chief of the Weather Bureau's division of climate and crop weather, points out, however, that, regardless of snowfall, the winter and spring wheat crops are endangered by lack of subsoil moisture reserve. Melting snow, he says, at best will only moisten the topsoil layer in most areas.

In other words, a disastrous drought in 1940 is possible if the "Nation's bread basket" does not receive normal or better-than-normal spring and early summer rains. It is on these rains, much more than on present or prospective snowfall, Kincer says, that the wheat crop depends.

Political Consequences

Political consequences of a severe 1940 drought would be great. Farmers may grumble when they get good crops and have to dispose of them at low prices, but they will be in a bad mood if there is a disastrous drought, it is pointed out. They may take their displeasure out on the Administration. The latter, nevertheless, would strive to make a good showing by liberal relief measures.

The reason Agriculture Department officials expect a 200,000,000 bushel spring wheat crop is that they look for a larger acreage due to heavy winter wheat acreage abandonment.

The severe cold, particularly noticeable in the District and in the Southern States, has been general over the entire area east of the Rocky Mountains.

The snowfall in the winter wheat area has not been particularly heavy, although by contrast with the previous dry spell it was a welcome relief. Snowfall in January was below normal except in Kansas, where it was mostly above normal.

Sen. Downey Introduces Modified Townsend Old-Age Pension Plan

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, introduced yesterday a modified Townsend old-age pension plan.

SEN. DOWNEY

It calls for a 2 per cent tax on all personal and corporate gross income above $250 a month and for pensions to all persons over 60 years of age and not gainfully employed. The amount of the pensions would depend upon the amount of money raised by the tax. There is a stipulation in the measure that no pension shall exceed $200 a month.

Pension receivers would be required to spend the entire monthly grant within 30 days.

President Roosevelt has signed a bill extending the lending authority of the Land Bank commissioner until June 1, 1942. Previous authority expired Thursday.

These loans, considered important in the refinancing of farm-mortgage indebtedness and financing of farm purchases since 1933, may be continued under the legislation with funds already available to the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, was guest at a "surprise" luncheon given by members of his office staff in honor of his fifty-seventh birthday aniversary. Present were Mrs. Smith and Representative Sumners (Democrat), Texas.

All except one of Pennsylvania's 33 other members of the House previously made known their intention to run again. Representative Allen, a Democrat, said he would not be a candidate for reelection.

Mann to Seek Foot-High Deer In Liberia

Zoo Director Going February 14 on Firestone Expedition

Deer that stand no more than a foot tall, midget elephants, red bush cows and weird snakes—not a dipsomaniac's dream but some of the animals which Director William M. Mann, of National Zoological Park, hopes to bring back from Africa.

His latest expedition, which will begin February 14 when his party of four sails from New York, was announced yesterday at a surprise party in the Zoo's reptile house.

The announcement was made at the luncheon jointly by Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, which operates the Zoo, and Harvey S. Firestone, jr., vice president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., the expedition's financial "angel." It will be known as the Smithsonian-Firestone Expedition.

Mrs. Mann Going

The party will comprise, besides Dr. Mann, his wife, Mrs. Lucile Quarry Mann, zoological investigator and author, and two of the Zoo's keepers, Roy Jennier and Ralph B. Norris. Mrs. Mann has accompanied her husband on many expeditions but this will be the first wild animal hunt for the two keepers.

Jennier, 27, is a nephew of the keeper of the zoo's reptile house, Ray H. Jennier. He has been with the zoo two years. Norris, 39, has been a keeper nine years.

Embarking from New York on the American freighter West Kebar, the party will set up camp in Liberia, on the African West Coast, where the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. has its vast rubber plantations.

Dr. Mann said the party expects to return to Washington in June with, he hopes, a complete collection of Liberian mammals, birds and reptiles. He is especially anxious to bring back alive specimens of the pygmy hippopotamus, zebra antelope, harnessed antelope, bongo, flying squirrel and the chevrotain or water deer.

The late Harvey S. Firestone presented a pygmy hippopotamus to the zoo about 13 years ago and Harvey S. Firestone, jr., has presented a Liberian potto and other unusual animals captured on the rubber plantations in recent years.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Felian Garzia, pianist, and Helen Turley, contralto, in Barker Hall. Program: Piano pieces by Liszt, Schumann, Chopin and Debussy; Songs by Treharne, Oliver, Hageman, Guion and Rummel. Accompanist: Mary Izant Couch.

Ever concerned with the recognition of resident musicians, the Friday Morning Music Club singled out two of the most esteemed and presented Helen Turley and Felian Garzia yesterday at the weekly meeting in Barker Hall. To hear either of these artists is always a pleasure, for their accomplishments are distinguished by the sincerity which is the mark of true musicianship. Their devotion to ideals and their subordination of self to the purposes of interpretation are obvious in all that they do.

In the reading of songs Mrs. Turley has a surety which is the product of her technical skill and her insight. Her command of tonal placement and phrasing is the outward sign of an inner poise and the evidence of her vocal knowledge, while her mastery of emotional shading reveals a subtle sense of poetic values. Her choice of songs for her single group showed a wide acquaintance with contemporary lyric literature.

She began with a setting of Shakespeare's "Sigh No More, Ladies," by the Welsh composer, Bryceson Treharne, whose creative activity in adverse circumstances was a modern instance of the afflatus that visited Schubert and Wolf. He was interned in Munich during the first part of the World War, and made light of his imprisonment by composing more than 200 songs. Other selections were Oliver's nostalgic "Nightingales of Lincoln Inn," Richard Hageman's "Music I Have Heard With You," David Guion's "Hopi Cradle Song" and Walter Rummel's "Ecstasy." She was ably accompanied by Mary Izant Couch.

Mr. Garzia gave a brilliant performance of Liszt's transcription of the Bach organ prelude and fugue in A minor, proficiency in technique being matched by clarity in exposition of themes. He then turned to the romantic school with eloquent readings of Schumann's F sharp Romanza and D major Novellette, and Chopin's F minor Fantasia.

ployes at the institution. The per capita of maintaining the home is 63 cents a day.

Inmates complained chiefly of the food, D'Alesandro said, although one man said it had improved since Mrs. Roosevelt's visit.

The Children's Receiving Home was in much better condition than the Home for the Aged, the Marylander said, although he condemned the mixing of small children left at the home because of the illness of parents, with older delinquents.

The public health subcommittee held its first meeting yesterday morning and outlined a procedure for the investigation. A scheduled hearing for Saturday night was called off because of the inability of Mrs. Roosevelt to attend.

D'Alesandro announced that Chairman Randolph, of the full District Committee, and Representative Dirksen, ranking minority member had agreed to serve as ex-officio members of the sub-committee to assist in the investigation.

Estimates that 40 per cent of colored boys admitted to the Receiving Home for Children have a venereal disease were denied yesterday by Superintendent Grady H. Leonard.

"Only a very small percentage of the boys who come to us are infected," he said. "The percentage of venereal disease is much greater among girls—I should say about 10 per cent of all girls admitted are infected."

Because the children "go in and out so quickly," Leonard said it was impossible to make careful examinations.

'Mystery' of the Gables Ends, Clark Surprised He's 'Missing'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Clark Gable and Carole Lombard, pictured on their wedding day last March, drove into Ensanada, Lower California, yesterday to report "we positively are not lost"

How Good a Detective Are You? There's A Big Clew in This Story; Here's Hint: It Was Publicity Man Who Was Worried

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, Feb. 2.—A 12-hour mystery entitled "Where are the Gables?" ended undramatically today. Clark simply phoned his studio: "Here we are. Why all the fuss?"

Gable and his movie-star wife, Carole Lombard, were in Ensenada, 50 miles below the Mexican border. They learned upon their arrival that they were missing. Both were amused.

Clark and Carole left a ranch, 115 miles south of Ensenada early yesterday. They had a date to meet a publicity man at a gun club for a birthday celebration. It was Gable's thirty-ninth.

When they didn't arrive the publicity man became worried.

Gable told his studio he didn't know anyone was looking for him and explained his absence thusly:

He and his wife left the ranch at 8 a. m. yesterday in their station wagon. En route north, they encountered a bus sideways on the road—with a broken axle. Gable managed to make a new road around the bus, drove the station wagon over it and reached the Lagrulla Gun Club, 15 miles from Ensenada, at 1 o'clock this morning.

"Imagine our surprise," the star told the studio, "to learn we were 'missing' when we got here. Heck, I never get lost."

'Servant Crises' Ironed Out At Job Center Conferences

D. C. Employment Serves as Arbiter In 10 to 15 Cases Weekly to Settle 'Maid Troubles' Menacing Domestic Peace

When the maid fails to show up and does not telephone creates a problem which many American housewives would rate No. 1 among those threatening the domestic peace of the Nation.

At the D. C. Employment Center, which serves as arbiter in 10 to 15 "servant crises" weekly, it rates high among questions to which Washington employers are seeking answers.

Every time the center places a service helper both the employer and employe are told to come back with their adjustment problems, if any arise. They do come back in ever increasing numbers, now that word of this additional service is getting noised about the city.

"Usually, the trouble is minor and the difficulty can be solved comparatively easily," Kathryn N. Fox, head of the service section, said yesterday. "The employers are always very grateful and the girls are, too, and naturally we are as interested in making a placement effective as we are in making it in the first place."

In some cities the knotty and virtually unsurveyed servant problem is being threshed out at employer-employe meetings, Miss Fox pointed out. Work being done at the center is the nearest approach to this in Washington, where—it often is declared—"everybody talks about how difficult it is to get and keep a good maid, but hardly anybody does anything about it."

Through the WPA maid training project, now under reorganization locally, some education is being undertaken from the employe end. Through the activities of various club groups, employers themselves are being instructed.

A committee of the local chapter of the American Association of University Women is setting up machinery for a complete survey of the household employment problem in the District, so widespread is "servant trouble" and so nebulous is any comprehensive information about it.

Chief complaints which domestic workers make about Washington employers, according to Miss Fox, are long hours expected, low salaries, no uniformity of standards and insufficient time off.

Wages for household help here vary from $6 to $15 per week. The average work week consists of 72 hours with the maid usually getting two afternoons off weekly.

Chief complaints of Washington employers are lack of trained workers, and lack of consideration for their responsibility even on the part of workers who have been trained.

The employment center declares there is a constant demand for trained workers from all parts of the city and that there is a distinct shortage of white domestics.

In January the agency placed 310 white household workers and 1,376 colored. Placements for the last six months of 1939 totaled 1,762 white and 6,251 colored.

Bailey Upholds Right to Close Mails to Frauds

The right of the Postmaster General to issue fraud orders closing the mails to business epterprises without giving them hearings was upheld by Justice Jennings Bailey in District Court yesterday.

Bailey refused to block enforcement of a fraud order against four St. Charles, Ill., companies.

William S. Tarver, assistant district attorney, said a postal examiner found the four concerns sent out postcards which gave prospective customers the impression that for 10 cents they would receive seeds, a flowering plant and a table scarf, but customers received only packages of seeds.

Hopes for Girl, 3, With Leukemia Are Raised, Then Dashed

What doctors fear is a cruel, though unintentional, hoax that victimized a gravely stricken 3-year-old girl and her parents had become an inter-national issue last night.

Central figure in the drama is little Leslie Lee Ross, who is critically ill in Children's Hospital while her parents and an uncle impatiently await shipment from Germany of a leukemia "serum" which American authorities are certain does not exist.

Canvassed yesterday by The Post in an effort to determine what, if anything, there is to this "serum" reportedly developed by a "Prof. Geslin" in Frankfurt-am-Main Germany, were the National Institute of Health and Army Medical Library, as well as several private pathologists.

No one had ever heard of "Prof. Geslin," leukemia researcher. No one had ever heard of the development of any drug, chemical, biological or any other therapeutic agent effective in the treatment of human leukemia. No one had ever heard of the recovery of an authenticated case of leukemia. All expressed fear that the parents of Leslie Lee, a beautiful child, were being built up to a tragic letdown.

If there was a ray of hope, it was in the statement of Col. Harold W. Jones, head of the world-famed Army Medical Library, largest institution of its kind, and which keeps posted up to date on research developments everywhere.

"The war has delayed the receipt of reports from Germany," he declared. "If this 'serum' had been announced only within the last few weeks it is possible that the descriptive paper is still en route to us."

N. G. Tayman, uncle of the girl, said last night he expects the State Department to receive a reply today from the American consul general in Frankfurt, stating whether the "serum" is obtainable and if it may be rushed, in the diplomatic pouch, to a transatlantic clipper plane.

Leslie Lee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Edward Ross, of Cheverly, Md. It was her uncle who, reading a press association report last Wednesday of "Prof. Geslin" and his leukemia treatment, requested the State Department to communicate with the consul general in Frankfurt.

French, Finns Seek New Type Of U. S. Plane

Bell Plant Is Ahead Of U. S. Schedule on 'Airacobra' Pursuits

By Devon Francis
Associated Press Aviation Editor

New York, Feb. 2.—Negotiations by the French government for purchase of one of the newest types of pursuit planes being manufactured for the United States Army may lend impetus to aid the Allies are giving Finland.

The French are dickering for a "considerable number" of the speedy Bell "Airacobra" planes, which carry a cannon in the nose and reach a top speed of more than 400 miles an hour.

Since the extent of French aid to Finland is conditioned on availability of replacement armament for their own defense, whatever Airacobras are bought here would release to the Finns a corresponding number of French planes.

Finland itself is trying to make direct purchase of Airacobras.

The Bell Aircraft Corporation, of Buffalo, N. Y., is ahead of its delivery schedule on an unspecified number of the planes ordered by the United States.

If the French are able to obtain the Bell planes, they will constitute some of the 3,000 pursuits for which the Allies are in the market for shipment no later than the autumn of 1941.

They also are concluding contracts for a total of 6,000 bimotored bombers.

Though Secretary Morgenthau last week termed engine manufacture the "bottleneck" of warplane production, both the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce and the Manufacturers Aircraft Association insisted that United States plants had an adequate productive reserve.

Army officials said in Washington they had no knowledge of the negotiations by the French and added that the "new Bell fighter has not been released to the French or any other government." Before any sale of the planes to a foreign power could be consummated, approval of the Army-Navy Aeronautical Board would have to be obtained.

4 At G. U. Take Jesuit Vows

Four members of the religious community of Georgetown University, the Rev. Daniel E. Power, the Rev. Vincent I. Bellwoar, the Rev. John R. Bradstreet and the Rev. Hubert C. Callaghan, took their final vows of the Jesuit order at a ceremony yesterday in Dahlgren Chapel at the University.

The vows, which were recited during the communion of the mass attended by Jesuit members of the faculty, the college student body and invited friends, were received in the name of the father general of the Society of Jesus in Rome by the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., rector and president of Georgetown.

Artists Draw Hot Sketches In Ink, See Them in Nothing

By Albert W. Wilson,
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 2.—There were plenty of nudes at the annual stag show given tonight by noted cartoonists and illustrators and beautiful artists' models, but it was all in fun and brought no frowns from city authorities.

Tycoons of Wall street, business executives and theatrical producers in the market for show material provided a normal quota of bald heads for the front rows and paid $15 a seat to the Society of Illustrators for the benefit of needy artists. They wore formal clothes but what they saw was anything but formal.

Those with an eye for sketches that might be adapted to Broadway or Hollywood shows—of course, with a few changes—included Ernest Lubitsch, movie director, and J. J. Shubert, whose "Artists and Models" series of Broadway musical shows brought dividends in royalties to the society for years.

Neither performers nor audience betrayed any fear of a repetition of the police raid three years ago which was prompted by an artist's wife. The show was given in a children's theater whose walls were decorated with nursery rhyme scenes.

The artistic high spot was an act in which William Arthur Brown, McClelland Barclay, Dean Cornwell, John La Gatta and Gilbert Bundy drew a mural entitled "Mr Tutt Goes to Town." Brown, as usual, did his familiar magazine character, "Mr. Tutt," but the others sketched nudes, placing the old gent of the Arthur Train stories in a new environment.

The mural, then, was lifted, revealing life models depicting the picture. They were posed by Jack Sheridan, who did a living models show at the New York World's Fair.

Illness prevented Charles Dana Gibson, oldest member and founder of the society, from participating.

All Her People Confident of Allied Victory, Daughter and Biographer of Radium's Discoverer Assures Capacity Crowd in Hall

Mlle. Eve Curie last night told a capacity audience at Constitution Hall that France felt it did not need any help from the United States or any other nation at the present stage of the war.

Daughter and biographer of radium's discoverer, Marie Curie, she spoke under auspices of the National Geographic Society. Mlle. Curie is attached to the French war information office.

Even in the French army units are being temporarily demobilized so that men can return to work, she said.

The French writer said the war had welded her people into a unit, and emphasized that no Frenchman doubts that the Allies will be victorious.

Mlle. Curie said Paris by day seemed the same as in peacetime, though at night the blackout does remind the people of the war.

Miss Barrie to Go Back Into Show With Barrymore

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Elaine Barrie, whose ardent welcome to John Barrymore upon his return to Broadway resulted in a "reconciliation," will return to the cast of her husband's starring vehicle, "My Dear Children," within the next two weeks.

Miss Barrie created the role, but left the show after a few weeks, complaining that her husband spanked her too realistically, and later filed divorce proceedings.

D. C. League For Democracy Also Disbands

Follows Action of National Group After Dies Criticism

The Washington branch of the American League for Peace and Democracy has voted to discontinue activities, in line with a similar decision by the national board and national committee of the organization, it was announced here yesterday.

The disbanding of the league nationally, which was criticized as a "front" for the Communist Party by the Dies Committee, was revealed at a dinner in New York Thursday night. In stating reasons for the decision, the Washington branch declared:

"Sharp difference of opinion on international affairs has made unified action impossible. Therefore, the very thing that made the league so effective, its unity of purpose and action, no longer exists. This means that the league cannot now operate as the most effective organization for the program needed at the present time."

Harry C. Lamberton, assistant ministration, is chairman of the Washington branch; Lucy Hancock, counsel, Rural Electrification Ad- executive secretary; the Rev. Albert C. Mollegen, of Virginia Theological Seminary, Sterling Brown and Sophia Pressman, vice chairmen.

France Backs British Stand On U. S. Mails

Seizure Held Legal; $8,000,000 Contraband Reported Taken

By the Associated Press

Paris, Feb. 2.—The French blockade ministry today backed up Britin's claim that the Allies are within their rights in examining United States and other neutral mails and asserted that the procedure had blocked an organized Nazi effort to send large quantities of money and foodstuffs to Germany.

Within the last three months, the ministry said in a communique, approximately $8,000,000 worth of contraband "exported by Nazi agents in the United States" has been extracted from parcels and letters.

In addition, American mail has yielded $10,000 in bills, £15,000 (about $60,000) in British currency and checks amounting to $425,000 destined for Germany, the ministry declared.

Labeled "Stained Glass"

Much of the contraband was found in containers bearing labels such as "stained glass," it was said. The goods seized also included a heavy traffic in foodstuffs labeled "Commercial samples."

Allied procedure was contrasted with German methods, which, the communique said, consisted in torpedoing neutral boats without warning in violation of international law. Article 1 of the eleventh Hague convention of 1907 was cited as authority for the Allied action.

British Note Held Justified

"Immunity of postal correspondence," the French communique said, "cannot be invoked to facilitate operations of the enemy."

Moreover, it declared, "the United States Government on May 5, 1916, admitted that notes and negotiable instruments were comparable to merchandise and submitted as such to the same exercise of belligerents' rights."

Absence of the control, now exercised by the Allies over mails destined for Germany, would facilitate German hostile acts," the communique said, and added:

"That is why the British response to the United States note of December 27 appears strongly justified."

across the country.

Flying northward, apparently from an Estonian air base, 9 planes raided Pielisaen.aki, damaging and burning several houses.

A squadron of 34 planes was sighted flying near the southwest coast.

Sixteen planes raided Kuopio, where two houses caught fire. A church was destroyed and a hospital machine gunned in Uusimaa. At Rauma at least one person was killed. At Kuovola and Kotka damage and casualties were minor.

At Sortavala, on the northern shore of Lake Ladoga, bombings resulted in a number of casualties and damage to houses.

The Soviet onslaught was the answer Finland got to President Kyosti Kallio's appeal Thursday for "an honorable peace." Today, as on previous occasions, the Moscow radio broadcast a declaration, quoting the Communist orgon, Pravda, to the effect that the Red army will "fulfill its duty for the liberation of the Finnish people from their White Guardists under Mannerheim. (Field Marshal Baron Manner heim, commander in chief of the Finnish forces.)

Moscow consistently has refused to recognize Kallio's Finnish government or its armies as anything but "Finnish bandits" or "Finnish White Gaurds," and says it will deal only with a "people's government" which it inspired. Today's broadcast said the Helsinki government would be "destroyed" as an enemy of "the working people of Finland."

Lake Attack Repulsed

The Isthmus attack, a frontal smash at the Mannerheim Line, was launched also to relieve disorganized and stalled Soviet divisions which attempted to flank the line north of Lake Ladoga.

Tonight's Finnish communique said the Finns had repulsed two more Red army attempts to cross the ice of Lake Ladoga and take Finnish-held, fortified islands off the north shore.

Soviet bombers roared over southern FFinland. Helsinki had two afternoon alarms, heard antiaircraft fire, but saw no planes. Twenty localities were raided Thursday.

Today's Finnish army communique follows:

Land—On the Isthmus (of Karelia) the enemy in the afternoon after intense artillery preparation attacked our positions in the Summa sector. The battle continued until late at night, but the enemy was repulsed.

Elsewhere on the isthmus there was mainly artillery activity. During the day enemy planes dropped many parachutist patrols. These were partly captured and partly annihilated.

Northeast of Lake Ladoga the enemy again directed attacks against Ladoga Islands, in our possession, but were beaten back. On the mainland there was lively patrol activity.

On other parts of the land front there was nothing important.

Sea front—nothing important.

Air—In the home area the enemy's air raids were accompanied by smaller bombings directed in south Finland against the Kymi Valley and also in the neighborhood of the town of Hamina, Laviis and Porvoo. In southwest Finland bombs were dropped in the area of Hanko, Karjaa and Tammisaari.

In the northern part of the country a raid was directed against Roveniemi. It was ascertained that losses among the civil population were one killed and some wounded.

On the Karelian Isthmus the enemy's air activity was especially lively. During the day many aerial battles were fought. According to checked reports our fighters and antiaircraft troops shot down five enemy planes. In addition, there were three uncertain cases.

Fire on Estonian Plane

Tallinn, Estonia, Feb. 2 (AP).—Russian warships in port here today fired shells and machine guns at an Estonian plane flying over the city.

Some of the shells fell into the streets without exploding, injuring one woman and causing minor material damage.

The plane landed undamaged.

(Presumably the Russians mistook the plane for a Finnish craft. Russia gained the right to make naval use of Estonian ports by a mutual assistance treaty concluded last September 29. Finnish planes have raided Russian bases in Estonia.)

Air Torpedoes Dropped

London, Feb. 2 (INS).—Soviet bombing planes are dropping "new aerial torpedoes" on Finnish towns and villages, it was reported late tonight in a dispatch to the London Daily Express from the newspaper's woman correspondent, Hilde Marchant, at Helsinki.

Miss Marchant cabled that the new Russian missiles are 7½ feet long and have tremendous explosive power.

to participate in the active duty or inactive status training of the unit to which he is assigned or who has not satisfactorily performed the administrative duties appropriate to his assignment will be relieved from assignment," the regulations direct.

Officers so relieved will be placed in an ineligible status, it is ordered, and dropped at the end of their five-year appointment. Those with 15 years' satisfactory service remain on permanent inactive status. Detailed procedure is set forth by which reserve commanders or special boards will recommend the relieving of delinquent officers.

higher ranking officers only have been on the books for some time, it was said, but have been largely unenforced. With the change, strict enforcement and a general housecleaning is proposed.

Local Reserve officers estimate that about a fourth of the 2,800 Reservists here may be subject to relief from duty under the move. Action has not yet been taken against any of them, pending more detailed instructions from Third Corps Area headquarters in Baltimore.

Britain Aims At 33% Rise In Exports

Restriction May Be Used on Rumania In Struggle for Oil

By Edwin Stout
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 2.—Britain's new export council will be charged with expanding exports of British goods to the rest of the world by more than one-third to pay war bills, it was reported tonight.

Undiluted expansion, however, may not be the whole aim, for restriction was pointed to today as a possible weapon in the struggle with Germany for Rumanian oil.

It was said Britain planned to permit exportation of goods Rumania needed only to the extent that she sent oil to Britain.

Prime Minister Chamberlain yesterday announced an export council would be set up to develop Britain's export trade

Streamlined Finance

Today government-directed industry, under the impetus of the war, was said to be looking for an increase in the value of exports from the 1939 total of £439,000,000 (about $1,756,000,000) to £600,000,000 ($2,400,000,000.)

One of the big weapons available for the drive is streamlined financial control which experts said would permit the subsidizing of exports where necessary to capture markets.

Another is the ability to control home consumption by law and to concentrate on exports even though this may result in depressing the domestic standard of living.

Clothing May Be Rationed

Authoritative predictions that rationing of clothing was imminent was one aspect of this.

The restriction of imports such as tobacco to conserve foreign exchange and the allotment of part of the £7,000,000 ($28,000,000) daily cost of the war to keep down home prices are other factors aiding the economic drive.

Lord Wardington, chairman of Lloyds Bank, told the annual stockholders' meeting today Britain had a "unique opportunity of gaining fresh markets for exports owing to the fact that Germany is largely cut off from her former trading grounds."

Seven Foreigners Reported Held in India Disorders

London, Feb. 2.—Incomplete reports of unrest along India's northwest frontier, with disorders in Waziristan and the arrest in Bombay of seven foreigners, including four Italians, allegedly involved in communicating with persons in Germany and European neutral countries, reached London today.

The India office in London asserted that the disturbances were created by scattered bands of tribesmen. No indication was given here whether a hostile foreign influence is stirring up the trouble.

Reports from Bombay state four Italian men, two German women and one Dutch woman are held on charges of violating the defense of India act.

Army's New Gun Won't Reach High Bombers, Says Officer

Maj. Phillips Blames Service for Lack of 'Proper Preparation'

The Army's vaunted new antiaircraft gun was described yesterday by one of its own experts as ineffective against modern bombing planes.

Maj. Thomas R. Phillips, instructor at the Command and General Staff School, asserted that the standard 3-inch gun with which regiments are now being equipped has a shorter range than foreign weapons now used. He charged that the Army has "resisted" proper preparation against air raids.

"Today we can be bombed," Phillips wrote in the Coast Artillery Journal. "Airplanes now are in being that can make the round trip from Europe to the United States with a small load of bombs."

Could Raid United States Ports

Such bombing would be similar to the big gun used by the Germans against Paris in the World War, he declared. It would be ineffective and costly, but would have a moral effect. Aircraft carriers, also, could launch raids against our ports, he said, with results "almost incalculable."

"While aviation has progressed by yearly bounds," he stated, "American antiaircraft has devoted itself to refinement of the materiel of ten years ago. It no longer can fulfill its mission."

Aerial bombing can now be carried on from altitudes 5,000 to 8,000 feet above the effective range of our 3-inch anti-aircraft gun, Maj. Phillips stated. Urging adoption of a larger cannon, he said that Great Britain, France and Germany maintain such longer-range weapons.

Criticizes Other Guns

Machine guns, which our Army relies upon for defending troops against low-flying airplanes, he said, "are not now and never have been effective weapons" for the purpose.

Nor is the American Army's new 37-millimeter gun effective for the purpose, Phillips added, terming a smaller, faster firing 20-millimeter cannon, developed by the Germans, superior.

Adequate protection against the bombing of coastal cities can not be furnished by defense aviation as many military authorities believe, the Leavenworth school instructor contended. A large supply of larger caliber antiaircraft guns, assisted by an air-raid warning net extending several hundred miles inland and to sea presents the only solution, he stated.

1,000 Batteries Urged

Partial responsibility for "our laggard antiaircraft preparations" is placed by Maj. Phillips on conservative older branches of the Army.

As an "irreducible minimum," Phillips proposed 180 batteries for the Regular Army and from 800 to 1,000 for the National Guard, manned by a force of 125,000 additional men. In service and in prospect for both are fewer than 100 batteries.

Japanese Army Resents 'Insult' In Parliament

Chiefs Hold Emergency Session After Plea They Abandon China

Tokyo (Saturday) Feb. 3 (AP).—Parliamentary criticism of the government's policy in China and a suggestion that troops be withdrawn to pave the way for a negotiated peace drew from infuriated army officers today a charge that the author made "open insults against the objectives of the sacred war in China."

The army leaders met in an emergency session after Takao Saito, veteran member of the lower house of Parliament, had made the suggestion. He asked the government to explain the meaning of its program for a "new order in East Asia."

Domei, Japanese news agency, said War Minister General Hata would reply to Saito some time today and that efforts would be made to have the latter withdraw his remarks.

The Social Mass Party declared Saito's remarks were "detrimental to the lofty ideals of the founding empire."

Demanding an exposition of the measures being considered for the settlement of the China venture, Saito declared:

"The people are acting in accordance with the dictates of the government because they believe they will bring the affair to a satisfactory conclusion.

"If the government betrays this confidence the results will be disastrous."

Concerning plans to install Wang Ching-wei, disaffected former premier of China, as head of the proposed new Japanese-sponsored government in China, Saito asked if this regime "will have powers necessary for its existence."

Before he finished Saito, member of the formidable Minseito Party, was greeted with a chorus of "No! No!" from aroused members of the house.

Japanese Trap Chinese Army Of 120,000

Swift Thrust Cuts Off Forces Massed For Nanning Push

By Victor Keen.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Shanghai, Feb. 2. — Japanese forces, in a sudden 25-mile thrust, occupied Pingyang at 5:30 p. m. today, cutting off between 120,000 and 200,000 Chinese troops previously based there for a projected recapture of Nanning, the strategic south Kwangsi city captured by the Japanese November 24.

The seizure of Pingyang, accomplished in a dawn to dusk drive, outflanks the Chinese units and leaves them with only a 15-mile bottle-neck between Szelung and Pingyang through which to withdraw via the Kunkunkwan Pass.

Sweeping down from the hills south of Pingyang early this morning, the Japanese right flank encountered 20,000 Chinese reinforcements on the Pingyang plain near Wulinghu, 10 miles southeast of Pingyang along the Wingshun Pingyang highway. Nine Japanese detachments routed the Chinese, reached Wulingsu at 2 p. m., pressed on and occupied their major objective of Pingyang at 5.

Planes Strafe Foe

Meanwhile seven detachments, constituting the Japanese left flank, captured Szelung, 12 miles southwest of Pingyang. Japanese planes bombed and strafed the Chinese who were being gradually squeezed in a pincer movement closing from the northwest and southeast.

General Futsoyi, former chairman of Suiyuan Province, is commanding the Chinese troops entrenched near Wuyuan, where the Japanese estimate that 50,000 Chinese forces are concentrated.

Upwards of a 100 persons, including about 10 foreigners, were killed and injured when 27 Japanese planes yesterday bombed a train approaching a bridge on the railroad connecting Haiphong, Indo-China, with Kunming, the capital of Yunnan Province, according to foreign press dispatches received from Kunming tonight.

French Among Casualties

The bombing occurred 50 miles away from the Indo-China border. Several Frenchmen, either passengers or railway employes, were believed to be among the casualties.

Officers and men of the British gunboats, Gannet and Falcon, recalled for home service, narrowly escaped the bombing. Their train was nearing the bridge when the bombing started.

What is expected to be one of the largest benefits of the campaign will be held at offices of the Washington Gas Light Co. on February 16 by the company's American Legion post. Provisions are being made for 100 card tables.

Latest March 8

The home of Robert Snow at 1912 Shepherd street northeast will be the scene, on a date to be announced, of the Second Division Post and Auxiliary Unit, No. 28, bank party. E. W. Fritz is post commander and Della Rocca auxiliary president. Members of their arrangements committee are Mrs. Annie Berthiaume, chairman; Mrs. Frances Snow and Mrs. Dorothy Schmidt.

Probably the latest party will be that given on March 8 by Police and Fire Post, No. 29, according to an announcement yesterday by Commander Preston E. Peterson. It will be held at 4209 Ninth street northwest.

The Colonial Village game party on February 20 is expected to eclipse its record of last year, when 50 tables "played for blood." Arlington Village will give its benefit the week of February 19, exact date to be announced later. Definite plans also have been made for a game at the Washington Golf and Country Club, but the date has not yet been set.

Donations Received

In his sermon to the Washington Hebrew Congregation this morning Dr. Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader, will urge support of the blood bank campaign, he said last night.

Usefulness of the "bank"—a depository for the storage of transfusion blood—will be described in an address at Central High School February 12 by Dr. Joseph Horgan, according to the District Medical Society. His lecture on "The Drama of Blood Transfusion" is under auspices of the society's speakers' bureau.

Donations and ticket receipts reported yesterday included Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, $5; Elizabeth Y. Miller, $5, and Jane K. Kauffmann, $2. Blood bank party tickets may be obtained by calling at The Post or writing to the Valentine Editor.

Following is the membership of the campaign's ladies' committee, as announced yesterday by Mrs. Van Devanter and Mrs. Green:

Film Exports Decline

American motion picture film exports for 1939 show a decrease of 27,600,000 linear feet in positive and negative sound films to foreign markets as compared with those exported in 1938, the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce reports. The decrease was largely owing to the war.

Women Urge Bomb Shelters At Air Centers

Defense Conference Of 34 Groups Ends 3-Day Session Here

Construction of bombproof shelters at all aviation manufacturing plants, major air bases and commercial airports in the United States was urged yesterday by the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

The conference, an alliance of 34 organizations, concluded a three-day session at the Mayflower Hotel with adoption of resolutions advocating military training on a voluntary basis for CCC boys, Congressional appropriation of the sums requested by the War and Navy Departments, suspension of immigration into the United States for 10 years, "or until such time as unemployment has returned to normal levels," and fingerprinting of all aliens.

Other resolutions demanded ratification of reciprocal trade treaties by the Senate, preference for American citizens over aliens in relief, and outlawing of the American Student Union, as "a Communist front organization," from all tax-supported universities.

Miss Helen Norris Cummings, in an address, pictured the Soviet Union as the embodiment of "the philosophy of destruction and doctrine of evil."

J. Carleton Beals, author and lecturer, told the convention patriotic groups must "fight propaganda with propaganda."

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will dedicate to the conference a radio address at 10 a. m. today over WJSV.

Holland Seeks To End Private Blockade Pacts

Government Would Decide What Control Firms May Permit

By the Associated Press

The Hague, Feb. 2.—Holland's government, seeking to avoid anything that could be used to throw her strict neutrality into question, introduced a bill in Parliament today by which it can stop Dutch companies from binding themselves to foreign control measures.

The legislation would empower the ministry of economic affairs to decide whether Dutch firms can make declarations or submit to supervision such as is demanded by the British contraband control authorities in blockading shipments to and from the Netherlands which might benefit Germany.

Informed observers interpret the Dutch government's measures as a skillful effort to show Germany that it is trying to lessen British contraband control. The Germans have suggested that Holland defy the contraband measures and make a "test case."

The first reaction to the government's measure came from the Socialist newspaper, Het Volk. It commented that the bill would not help the long Dutch-British negotiations in London which are intended to find some way of relieving the pressure of contraband control of Dutch business.

The measure is expected to become a law next week.

Holland's exports to Germany, normally her best customer, have been heavily reduced because of the British policy of restricting raw materials entering Holland to strict home needs, with no surplus to convert into goods for Germany.

Byrnes Drops Fight on Hazen

was to obtain a hearing for Brodie, a native South Carolinian, and that the only reason he had blocked Hazen's confirmation was because his letter of inquiry had not been answered adequately.

The Senator said that Brodie had told him that the only information he could obtain from police or District officials following his demotion was that he had been seen in the company of gamblers. Byrnes remarked that this fact was not surprising concerning a policeman.

Brodie later issued the following statement:

"I have been a member of the police force in Washington for 22 years and a detective sergeant for 16 years. In all my long experience there has been no complaint of my service.

Explains Plea to Byrnes

"When I was demoted in November, I asked the reason for the demotion. I was told that it was for the good of the service and later that I had been seen in the company of gamblers. I demanded an opportunity to know what I was supposed to be guilty of and that I be given a chance to answer. I could get no further information.

"Because I was a South Carolinian I appealed to Senator Byrnes and to Congressman McMillan to try to find out what the charges were against me. I felt if I had been guilty of misconduct I should be discharged from the service instead of being demoted. If I were guilty of violating any law, it seemed to me that I should have been prosecuted.

"I only asked for the opportunity to answer any charges they have against me. I think every police officer should be given that opportunity. I am now told I will be given a trial and that is all I ask.

"I have been told that it may mean losing my job, but I do not mind that. There is something in life more than a job and that is the good name I want for my wife and six children."

Eerie Sequel To Former Hit At RKO-Keith's

'Invisible Man Returns,' 'Republic of Finland,' Share the Screen

By Richard L. Coe.

"THE INVISIBLE MAN RETURNS." Universal picturization of a story by Kurt Siodmak and Joe May, suggested by H. G. Wells' "The Invisible Man," adapted to the screen by Lester Cole and Mr. Siodmak, with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Vincent Price, Nan Grey, John Sutton, Cecil Kellaway and Alan Napier. Directed by Joe May. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

Finland's stirring determination to retain its body politic and "The Invisible Man's" amusing antics to regain his body corporal contrast sharply on RKO-Keith's screen this week. The "March of Time's" release on "The Republic of Finland" and "The Invisible Man Returns," a chilling sequel to the H. G. Wells film of 1933, are the attractions.

Because Finland is news, this latest issue of the documentary short subject has an interest which no one can deny. For 18-minute drama to pack such a punch, camera records of years past and time present were vital. The neat, clean city of the north, busy and prosperous, gives way in these few minutes to a burning hell of bombs and destruction; the nonaggression pact of J. Stalin is followed immediately by a declaration of a "Moscow spokesman" that "Finland has attacked Russia." With scenes laid in our Capital and clips from World War days, "The Republic of Finland" is a gripping, eloquent plea to a watching world.

"The Invisible Man Returns" with some wonderful new tricks. Wherever invisible men go, "Geoffrey Radcliffe" has been and a resourceful cameraman has stuck close to his transparent side. The story is a unique tale of a man condemned for murder, but who is freed by a scientist friend's eerie potion.

A Moot Question

"When," asks blonde Nan Grey of her elusive fiance, "shall I be seeing you again?" Never was a cliche uttered so aptly.

"How," asks scientific John Sutton of himself, "am I to bring him back from the horizon?" That natty trick is not his, but the cameraman's triumph. First a vein, then a tendon, next a bone appear to become, in an ultimate burst of glory, Vincent Price, whose voice and muffled moans have been frightening the respectful miners in the north of England into a beady lather. Mr. Price spends all but the last close-up of the film in the nebulous form of the suspected nobleman, "Sir Geoffray Radcliffe."

While, for some, time may have robbed these camera didoes of the novelty which made "The Invisible Man" and the first "Topper" film so refreshing, there is invention for even the initiated. The present scenarists have created a background of realism and a story of mere murder as an accompaniment for the incredulous circumstances of the disembodied one.

As we have said, the technicians are the real heroes of the piece, but Vincent Price, from what we could see of him, is thoroughly acceptable in the title role. Sir Cedric Hardwicke is suave and nasty, Nan Grey charmingly dumbfounded and John Sutton happily unhappy as the scientist. How they are related to the earlier film's characters we leave to you.

"Aquapoise," a Floridian sports short, and the Pathe and Universal newsreels complete the bill which restores Keith's to the "popular price," continuous showing field.

Earle

Does it pay to sell glamour short occasionally? Apparently, yes. Here's "The Fighting 69th," a rip-roaring epic of battle and sudden death, devoid of sex and sarongs, going into its second week at the Earle.

Troublemaker Jimmy Cagney is in his top troublemaking form in this one. Jimmy wouldn't be the right kind of soldier. He sasses his officers, won't keep his collar buttoned, is too handy with his fists, talks a lot about wiping out the Germans, but takes to his heels when shells start to drop around his ears. His fighting heart is in the right place, but his feet won5t let him stay when the bullets start to whistle.

But there's much more to "The Fighting 69th" than Cagney. It's a broad and dashingly limned canvas of 1918 training camp and front line days. It includes such famed figures as Father Duffy (played by Pat O'Brien) and Maj. "Wild Bill" Donovan (played by George Brent). You see the green troops, the comedy of the training camps, soldiers slogging through the incredible mud of La Belle France, the roaring horror of the front.

But helter-skelter comedy is always bobbing up to keep the picture from getting too black. There's the grand general fight between the New Yorkers and Alabamans in training camp. There's the French donkey who won't stir unless someone sings prettily to her. There's always a laugh around the corner.

The players in "The Fighting 69th" are so universally adept that they all should have credit. Even the tiniest "bit" parts are played with expertness and conviction. Highest among the supporting cast are Alan Hale, who's divested himself of his mustache for once, and Frank McHugh. Both contribute immeasurably to the gayer side of the picture.

Maxie Baer and Tony Galento give the newsreel a great big life.

"Red" Skelton explodes a bunch of new impersonations this week. His ideas of bus passengers and various kinds of husbands had the customers in a storm of giggles. Lovely Helene Faye scored beautifully, too, in a group of violin numbers executed with delicacy and finesse. Paul Kirkland climbs to the top of an unsupported ladder and then makes it dance in what is very nearly tap stepping. The Del Rios do the kind of acrobatics that gets audiences to holding their breath. The remarkable little Roxyettes are all playing accordions this week, and very nicely.

Mary Harris.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The 'Lubitsch Touch' Again Evident In 'Shop Around the Corner,' Capitol

Steward and Sullavan Costar in Gentle Whimsy of Budapest; 'Barn Dance' on Stage

"THE SHOP AROUND THE CORNER." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a play by Nikolaus Laszlo, adapted to the screen by Samuel Raphaelson, costarring Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart, with Frank Morgan, Joseph Schildkraut, Sara Haden, Felix Bressart, William Tracy, Inez Courtney, Sarah Edwards, Edwin Maxwell, Charles Halton and Charles Smith. Produced and directed by Ernst Lubitsch. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Thanks to the deft manipulation of whimsical comedy, the finesse and the implied naughtiness that have come to be known as the "Lubitsch touch," "The Shop Around the Corner" becomes an amusing, gracious and warming study of a small group of simple folk in Budapest.

BELL

While Continental in flavor, the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exhibit, displayed yesterday for the first time on a Washington screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, might relate to the leather goods store to be found, as the title directs, in any American city. Fragile in dramatic content, it is, nevertheless, a keen study of human relationships that might exist in any community.

Reaching no high points of emotional or physical climax, the gentle tale, adapted with fine skill by Samuel Raphaelson from a play by Nikolaus Laszlo, progresses naturally and effectively, through a series of developments that are believable and, as Mr. Lubitsch has rendered them, ingratiating and charming.

The action of the play centers in the prosperous shop of Hugo Matuschek, who vends handsome leather goods to his customers. His head salesman and a new clerk are the pivotal figures in the romantic movements of the comedy. Constantly at loggerheads in the conduct of the profitable business of their employer, they are at the same time anonymous wooers through the blind avenues of the mail. When Herr Matuschek suspects his wife of 22 years of a clandestine affair with one of his employes, he hazards a wrong guess as to which is the culprit and discharges the wrong man. The results are momentarily dire, but eventually happy for all concerned.

Unerringly Directed

There is none of the biting satire of Mr. Lubitsch's earlier production of "Ninotchka," starring Garbo, in this latest demonstration of his unmatched capacity for bringing life and warmth to a subject that would be merely vapid in other hands. There is in it, however, a wealth of those inspired accents on both comedy and pathos that mark Lubitsch as one apart from the common run of directors.

"The Shop Around the Corner" has been cast with extraordinary sagacity. The costellar roles of Klara Novak and Alfred Kralik, played by Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart, could not have been more judiciously assigned. Miss Sullavan brings to the part of the "psychologically confused" young shopgirl precisely the right note of ingenuous bewilderment and to his character of the head salesman James Stewart brings the full force of his peculiar penchant for underplaying. Frank Morgan, as the domestically harassed proprietor of the establishment, reveals an often concealed capacity for bringing real feeling to roles of something more than purely comic import. Joseph Schildkraut portrays the not-so-villainous villain in perfect key with the other major characterizations.

Rustic Revue Clicks

The "Barn Dance" stage revue at the Capitol this week is a closely integrated offering that presents a group of clever specialists, under the general supervisory foolishness of Harry Stevens. After introducing Phyllis Colt—known to Washington as Kitty Simons—as the songstress of the frolic, Mr. Stevens goes on to Master and Rollins, two eccentric singing and dancing stars of utter grotesquery; the "Melody Men," a double male quartet, and Rae and Davis, two feminine buffoons in an interval of high hilarity. Not to be outdone by the others, Mr. Stevens himself holds the stage an interminable time with his voice and banjo in a session of "community singing" that brought down the house, in a manner of speaking, yesterday afternoon.

Sam Jack Kaufman's intimate overture and the Fox Movietone News complete a bill that laid the capacity matinee audience in the aisles at yesterday's first performance.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 2.

JOHN BARRYMORE'S male nurse told Elaine Barrie in Fefe's Monte Carlo at 4:15 a. m. Thursday: "We have a car, so we'll take you home." Miss Barrie clutched her husband's arm and told the nurse: "I have a car—so we'll take you home." Miss Barrie won after the most amazing exhibition ever seen in a New York night club . . . When she entered the cafe she noticed that Otto Preminger was one of Barrymore's guests and asked Otto to dance with her. He obliged, and then she escorted him back to his table, pushed Diana Barrymore from her place at John's side and told her step-daughter: "Make room. I'm his only relative."

DIANA WEPT and pleaded for some one to rescue her father and take him out of Elaine's reach. Frank Chapman, husband of Gladys Swarthout, obliged—by taking Barrymore to the men's room. But when they emerged, Elaine was waiting at the head of the stairs. . . . Barrymore stopped to purchase some cigarettes, but had no money. "I'll pay for it," Elaine stated. "I might as well pay for your cigarettes—I paid for our marriage license."

SHE SEATED him in the outer room and poured water into his drinks to weaken them. The weeping Diana asked him to take her home. "No; I prefer to stay," said Barrymore . . . His daughter left, sighing: "Well, it's his life" . . . Jack Colt, John's nephew, approached the table and spoke sharply to Elaine—who reminded him: "I am your aunt and should be treated with respect" . . . "Oh, all right," Colt snapped—and kissed her brow . . . "Smile," said Elaine, "when you do that."

BARRYMORE'S male nurse joined their table, and the camera men photographed them—paying no heed to the departing guests. . . . the Tyrone Powers, Ernst Lubitsch, Sally Eilers, Elsa Maxwell. . . . Doris Dudley, who had replaced Elaine as the third child in "My Dear Children," sat at the bar and announced: "That makes me the fourth" . . . "No, I'm the fourth," replied Elaine, "and there'll be no other" . . . In the lobby, just before they left the camera men asked John to pose kissing Elaine, and he agreed, an observer muttered: "Nutty" . . . "Sure I'm nutty," shouted Barrymore, accompanying Elaine into a car. "Of course I'm nutty, I've been nutty for years. . . . And, so, good night, all; may the angels lull you gently to sleep."

ON THE STAGE at "Streets of Paris" Wednesday night Billy Branch was served with papers in a separation suit brought by his wife, asking for $75 a week alimony and $750 counsel fees. Then he continued his routine—throwing knives at the plaintiff. Mrs. Branch, his partner in the act . . . Frank Nuget, film critic for the New York Times, is considering a one-year offer to write scenarios for Darryl Zanuck. . . . Contracts were signed providing for the withdrawal of the Screen Actors Guild broadcasts, to be replaced by Ellery Queen . . . Elizabeth Hawes, the fashion designer, is retiring from her current enterprise to open a small laboratory. She'll also be associated with P. M., the new tabloid.

PHIL SILVERS, the burlesque comic whose first Broadway show was the recent "Yokel Boy," left for Hollywood Sunday night, pursuant to his new M-G-M contract . . . From Kansas, he wired his friend, Goodman Ace: "Just got the horrible thought that maybe they meant Sid Silvers."

THE AMERICAN Youth Congress, the National Maritime Union, the League of American Writers, T. A. C. and some C. I. O. unions will unite in a keep-America-out-of-war program by asking contributors to purchase "Civil Liberty 'Bonds.'" It will be another form of contribution . . . The London Daily Express cabled its American correspondent to rush all scores of hockey matches, because the Canadian troops were demanding them.

OLSEN & JOHNSON were at the Rainbow Room with Doodley Hunt, gubernatorial candidate in Tennessee, and Leip Heinzig, the Collector of Internal Revenue there. They stopped at the bar on the way out and then left. At Fifth avenue a cab pulled up and out came the waiter reminding them that they had forgotten to pay the $1.80 bar bill.

RICHARD KNIGHT, the lawyer who stood on his head at the opera, has written a full-page masterpiece, Explaining All, which Town and Country is publishing in settlement of his threatened suit for $12,000,000. . . . Sam Jaffee rushed to the defense of his friend, Erich Leinsdorf, the Met. conductor who was criticized by Kirsten Flagstad and Lauritz Melchior. "Eric," Sam announced, "has a 14-karat sterling character" . . . Jerry Horwin, co-author of "My Dear Children," is the only author who ever complained because an actor adhered to the script. "It's terrible," he lamented of Barrymore last night. "He's sticking to his lines."

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 2.

Frank Craven on "Our Town" set got to talking about how kids of today could get their training. Frank said: "The only way is to have a lot of classes like Charles Coburn has back in the Mohawk Valley, and which he's starting here at U. C. L. A., then let them come on the sets and watch their elders, just as we did. We learned by imitation, watching the great stars. You don't suppose the Barrymores would be so good today if they hadn't had the Drews to copy, and their parents. They never missed an opportunity. Neither did I, neither did you. Why, I was thrown out of Green rooms so often they nicknamed me Greengill Craven. And don't tell me Mickey Rooney would be the actor he is today, if he hadn't been born in a wardrobe trunk and watched his daddy and rest of the comics, and been pushed out on the stage and made to be funny. Or made such fun of when he got off. Look at that scene now," said Frank, pointing to Beulah Bondi and Fay Bainter. "They're not acting, they're living those parts. They're stringing beans, their hands look as though they have done that kind of work. Nails broken down, without polish.

HOPPER

I went to see Joan Bennett in "Green Hell" and in the darkest jungle her nails shone so they could have been used as a beacon light for an airplane. Our teachers must be the finest. Those who know how through experience like Coburn, Mme. Ouspenskaya, Phyllis Loughton, Florence Enright—not a lot of people who teach you to say, 'Ah, ah, ah!' A golf pro makes you stand and watch him. In my youth, I used to marvel at James Aherne, how little he did and how much he got over. Ned Sparks is exactly like Dan Dailey." Yes, I agree with Frank, let's give our kids the best teachers, instead of a lot of people put in for political reasons.

Barney Phillips, who played an Irishman on my radio show—and does that song, "Bill of Rights" in "Meet the People" had to turn down George Kaufmann's offer to play Harpo Marx, the part that's known as Banjo, in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Yes, it never rains—but it pours. And Vivien O'Brien, from same show, was signed by Metro. Then months ago she was taken there by a talent scout—they looked her over and said, "Sorry, we can't use her, no talent." Which makes me believe Walter Wanger's right—he finds his own, never trusts to scouts.

I got a kick out of Gladys George, who's on her way to New York to do Brock Pemberton's next play, "Lady in Waiting," a dramatization of "The Nutmeg Tree." Gladys, as you may remember, was the glamorous motion picture star in "Personal Appearance"—Hollywood couldn't wait until she'd finished that to get her out here so they could completely deglamorize her. She's made 15 pictures—most of them—as Gladys says, she's played broken-down old bags. The only time she came within bowing distance of her old part in "House Across the Bay" where she was allowed to be funny. So Boss Pemberton says, "Enough to this nonsense—come back to papa and get into your glad rags. She's turned down three pictures to do it—wouldn't you?

'Gone' Begins Second Week At the Palace

Mounting Public Interest Marks Continuation Of Overlength Film

Entering its second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater upon a greater wave of public enthusiasm than marked its icy and snowbound introduction to the Capital, "Gone With the Wind" seems pointed for an unparalleled run.

This Technicolor picturization of the Margaret Mitchell novel is fully deserving of this popular attention for more than one reason. More than double the length of the ordinary motion picture feature, it brings new distinction to the screen as an ideal medium for expansive story telling. It presents a cast that numbers many of the foremost names in the cinema. It offers photographic effects that strike new notes in pictorial splendor.

On the other hand, it depicts with perhaps too much realism the most daring and most unconventional aspects of the novel upon which it is based. The first half of the film is completely engrossing, with its poignant visualization of the havoc that was wrought in the Old South by Sherman's march to the sea, the siege of Atlanta and the destruction of a form of civilization that has never been known to this country since. The second half is devoted to a purely romantic recital of the vicissitudes that Scarlett O'Hara encountered in her insatiable quest for physical well-being, comfort and the luxury of riches. Out of this mosaic, David O. Selznick, the producer, and Director Victor Fleming—one of three who had a hand in the making of the vast panorama—have evolved a picture that stands alone, not only in the breadth of its canvas but also in the completeness with which it has encompassed the tremendous movement of Miss Mitchell's gargantuan fiction.

In the two stellar roles of Scarlett O'Hara and Rhett Butler, Vivien Leigh and Clark Gable are, to all intents and purposes, perfectly cast. Their individual and joint work insured the British Miss Leigh a brilliant future in the American cinema and Mr. Gable a complete restoration of his title to a leading position among the native stars of the screen.

Olivia de Havilland, Leslie Howard, Ona Munson, Thomas Mitchell, Hattie McDaniel and Laura Hope Crews are among those of a large cast who contribute most to the fulfilment in celluloid of all that Miss Mitchell sought to embody in her book.

Preceding the morning and afternoon unreserved presentations of the feature, a long list of short-reel subjects are shown preliminary to the unwinding of the 3-hour-and-47-minute feature.

Belasco

"Olympia," a pictorial record of the last Olympic games, held in Berlin, had its Washington premiere in the Belasco Theater last night.

Dedicated to the youth and glory of the world, the picture is introduced by an imaginative prologue that leads from the ancient ruins of Greece to the stadium in Berlin where the international athletic competitions were held. Once into the contests of speed, skill and muscle, greatest accent is laid upon the track and field events, won by America, with Finland finishing in second place against the flower of physical prowess of 49 other nations.

The swimming and diving events also come in for a large measure of close analysis by the 55 cameras that were trained upon the field during the progress of this expertly photographed Olympiad. It is to the high quality of the photography, as a matter of fact, that "Olympia" is indebted for its greatest effectiveness. The various competitors of all nations and the events in which they participated are "shot" from every possible angle, with results that are as eloquent as they frequently are beautiful. Slow motion often is employed to depict the perfect rhythm and coordination of the champions in their respective branches of sport.

Not the least interesting aspect of the film is to be found in the cameramen's shrewd survey of crowd reaction to the various contests that are pictured. Mass stadium views are swiftly alternated with intimate closeups of particular sections of the stands—usually those occupied by the most violent partisans of the winning athletes.

A stirring musical score has been supplied the sound track to add impetus to the excitement that permeates every foot of the celluloid. It was frequently faulty in reproduction last night, but still a helpful factor in the success of a much-discussed film that has been stripped of every suggestion of propaganda on behalf of any country.

The Belasco engagement is for the partial benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund. It should profit handsomely from those with an eye to sportsmanship in its highest manifestation.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood Feb. 2 (INS).—One of the most surprising books of any year was "The Boy Grew Older," a novel written by the late Heywood Broun nearly ten years ago. A sophisticate, Broun told a human-interest and extremely simple tale of a man who is left alone with a boy. There are touches of humor and Broun brilliancy, but nothing of a political or socialistic nature. The story was supposed to be that of Broun's own young son of whom much was written when Heywood was the favorite columnist on the New York World.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"Well, "The Boy Grew Older" is headed for the movies. It was bought by John M. Stahl, who is in New York, and will be made by him as soon as he settles his releasing arrangement. His Columbia deal did not materialize and John is now talking business with United Artists and it looks good.

"The Grapes of Wrath" will pay off itself in no time, for it is doing tremendous business in New York. "Gone With the Wind," which cost $4,000,000, will pay that expense in two and a half months. "The fighting 69th" is also getting the shekels in at the box office, so it isn't surprising that 1940 will see fewer and better pictures. The cheap pictures will be eliminated and only class productions will come out of Hollywood. That means that the shorts will come into their own and instead of the intermediate group, you will see big productions and supplementary entertainment—short reelers. This will mean the death knell of the double feature, which, I believe, is largely responsible for the bad business at the box office.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Countess di Frasso trained in yesterday and will be at her Beverly Hills home for three months; Norma Shearer has hied herself to Sun Valley to bring back her children, who were there while she was in New York. She'll be back the last of the week; late arrivals at Ciro's the other night were Ginger Rogers and George Kaufman with the Samuel Goldwyns; George Brent christened his new Toluca Lake house with a house warming; the Sam Jaffes hosted a cocktail party honoring Edna Woolman Chase, editor of Vogue. Sunday George Cukor will also entertain for her; talked with Frieda Inescourt at the Jaffes. She is greatly excited over her role in "Pride and Prejudice;" Justice Johnson, formerly Mrs. Walter Wanger, and Gilbert Emory, a night-club pair at the Grace Hayes Lodge.

Harry Cohn is on his way to New York and Florida for his first vacation in a long time; Mary Healy and Ken Murray at Ciro's; Carole Landis, on her way to the hospital with her sister, an expectant mother, was stopped by a cop. When he learned the reason for the fast driving he turned around and became their escort.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

"That letter," said Hook, "was dated December 7, 1939; and yet the allegedly forged documents were bought from Mayne about December 22, nearly two weeks after the counsel of the Dies Committee had written Mayne."

"If I had had the knowledge that agents of the Dies committee had, prior to the publication of thes so-called forged documents, I would never have put them in the Record," Hook observed.

In his speech to the House last night, Starnes asserted that "the gentlemen who appeared before the committee today — Representatives Ramspeck, Larrabee and Coffee—advised against the use of the documents" which were "later found to be forgeries."

"One of these gentlemen said that even granting the authenticity of the documents, it would not be legal and not ethical to use them," said Starnes.

"No testimony was received that would in any way involve Messrs. Ramspeck, Larrabee, Coffee and Murdock of any unethical conduct," Starnes concluded.

Economy And The Voter

It is believed in some quarters that the way to attract votes is to approve of liberal Government spending; the way to alienate voters is to cut outlays. That is plainly the opinion of Secretary Wallace, who warned House members that drastic reductions in the budget recommendations for the farm program would be resented by the farmers. He declared that the farmers would "make known their feelings" in the November elections.

There is, however, another development which Mr. Wallace fails to take into account—namely, the growing public disaffection toward the spending program. That is partly due to a keener realization of the effect of mounting expenditures upon taxpayers. In States where local levies are particularly onerous, for example New York, there are already unmistakable signs of an incipient revolt of taxpayers. At least opposition to new taxes is so strong that the State legislators are positively intimidated.

More important, however, from the viewpoint of Congress is the growing public uneasiness over the succession of huge budgetary deficits. Since the budget cannot be balanced without drastically cutting expenditures, demands for economy are meeting with a popular response which indicates that advocacy of spending is no longer a sure way to capture votes.

The energy with which the House Appropriations Committee set to work to prune the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill strongly suggests that Congress has sensed a change in the voters' attitude toward retrenchment policies. Of course the efforts to bring outlays for agriculture within more reasonable limits may not survive the assaults and threats of the farm bloc, but it is at least encouraging that the committee has taken a strong stand in favor of economy.

The chairman of the Appropriations Committee is reported to have said in explanation of the proposed reductions, "We had to cut somewhere." That may not be a very illuminating reply, but it does indicate that the pressure to cut Government costs, however much it may hurt, is a powerful driving force at the present time.

Parks And People

Mrs. Roosevelt is far from alone in her wish, expressed this week before the American Planning and Civic Association, for a body that would be "as interested in planning about human beings as about parks." Throughout the centuries this same general idea has preoccupied many minds, including some of the best and noblest, and has been the starting point of many an elaborate system of political theory.

At various times in history there have been most energetic attempts by government to remake this sorry world nearer to the heart's desire. In some isolated cases, and for a brief time, the result seems indeed to have been a remarkable betterment in the lot of all concerned, as, for example under the benevolent despotism of the Incas, or in the gentle tutelage of Paraguayan Indians by the Jesuit missionaries. But far more often the outcome has been disaster all around. It was as a sad and disillusioned man that Plato, greatest of all the great social planners, returned from his experience at Syracuse.

In every great plan, from Plato to Marx, for the creation of the ideal society the aim has been an increase of human happiness—an aim with which few or none will dare to quarrel. But since multitudes of men cannot always be trusted to recognize the authentic way of happiness, planning must be accompanied by power. And because there is always the minority whose happiness runs counter to that of the greatest number, a little power must lead to more and more power; the prisons must be filled, the guillotines must work, the Tchekas must redouble their vigilance, and instead of more happiness there is much less.

After all, parks are not made to please the trees and flowers but, as Mrs. Roosevelt wisely observed, "for the benefit of human beings." The elm, in all probability, would prefer the forest and the rose to remain wild. At any rate, humanity as a whole has rarely relished any of the efforts to transplant it into one or another of the beautifully-landscaped utopias of the political theorists.

NLRB Disintegration

As Dr. William M. Leiserson said when testifying before the House committee investigating the NLRB, "It is natural and healthy that the members of a quasi-judicial body should disagree on important problems, just as courts disagree. Such disagreement is a basic condition for progressive improvement."

This week Chief Justice Hughes expressed the same thought in his address on the 150th anniversary of the opening of the Supreme Court. He pointed out that it was not surprising that difficult questions of constitutional law should give rise to acute differences of opinion. "The more weighty the question, the more serious the debate," he said, "the more likely is the opportunity for honest and expert disagreement."

It is not to be expected, therefore, that the members of the Labor Relations Board should always present a united front on problems about which there is room for honest differences of opinion. Indeed, if the heads of a new agency, operating under a loosely drawn statute subject to varying interpretations, should always agree, they would be suspected of collusion.

There is a profound difference, however, between the kind of amicable disagreements that work toward constructive ends and those that spring from personal antagonism and mutual distrust. Unfortunately, the testimony of witnesses before the House investigating committee, notably that of Dr. Leiserson, recently appointed member of the board, and chairman Madden, reveal the existence of disagreements of the latter type. And such disagreements preclude effective cooperation.

Counsel for the House committee extracted from the files of the NLRB various memoranda written by Dr. Leiserson which indicated doubt as to the administrative competence of his colleagues and strongly attacked the secretary of the board and his chief assistants. In view of the denunciatory character of some of these inter-office communications, it was to be expected that Chairman Madden would retaliate with a counterattack from the witness stand. He has characterized certain statements of Dr. Leiserson as "extreme," "intemperate" and "completely unsupported."

The merits of this internal controversy cannot be adequately judged by outsiders. But it is evident that the dispute has reached a degree of bitterness which makes it impossible for those involved to work together effectively.

The NLRB is confronted by an undertaking of extreme difficulty in developing an efficient administrative organization while endeavoring at the same time to function as a quasi-judicial agency. Its work has been rendered especially onerous by the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. split which leads to innumerable conflicts concerning the appropriate bargaining unit. Functioning under the handicap of a divided labor movement, the board has further weakened its effectiveness by the internal disputes which have set member against member and divided subordinates into opposing camps.

Apart, therefore, from any amendments to the Labor Relations Act which may result from the current hearings, the testimony has unquestionably demonstrated the need for a thorough overhauling of the administrative organization. Changes in personnel are essential to eliminate friction and enable a reconstituted Labor Board to function harmoniously, with the aid of assistants who have the confidence of all their superiors.

Beau's Peep

There appeared yesterday the first issue of a new magazine, for and about Washington, named Beau. From its glossy cover a man in a top hat and a sleek lady look down on the town which they wish to make their home. And Beau's hat, we are told by the editors, "conceals not a vacuum, but a brain—a brain in which sophistication, a regard for truth and a streamlined sense of humor are, shall we say, subtly blended."

It is a difficult course which this young man has elected to follow. Others before him have started in the same blithe way and later given up, or, as they say, "folded." For one thing, there is no room in Washington for a transplanted New Yorker. The magazine that succeeds here will be the one which captures the essence of the place, whatever that may be.

And the most difficult task of all is just that. It will be to decide what there is in this city which provides the essentials of its character, or whether there is anything in this most anomalous of communities which is unquestionably "Washington." The city on the Potomac has long presented a knotty problem even to those who know it best. For while the shell is always here, from year to year the substance is never the same. And yet there is something about Washington, to those who come and go, which never changes.

It will take all Beau's asserted sophistication, regard for truth, and "streamlined sense of humor" to meet this challenge. But perhaps because he is young and enterprising, he may succeed where others have failed. In any case, a pleasant journey.

Precarious Neutrality

The difficulties of neutrality for small nations, unable to defend themselves effectively by force of arms, are being graphically illustrated by the troubles of the so-called Balkan Entente, the council of which assembled in Belgrade yesterday for its first meeting since the outbreak of the war.

The limited membership of this entente—Greece, Rumania, Turkey and Yugoslavia—itself indicates its weakness. Two countries which should be members of any effective Balkan combination—Bulgaria and Hungary—are not participants. They remain out primarily because both have claims on large slices of Rumanian territory and consequently are in no way interested in joining a combination from which Rumania expects support.

These abstentions alone would serve to make the Balkan Entente little more than an impressive phrase. But it is assailed by other difficulties also. Two of the members, Greece and Turkey, have been drawn into the economic and political orbit of Great Britain and France. The other two members, Rumania and Yugoslavia, are under steadily increasing pressure from Germany. The cleavage was well summed up by the Turkish foreign minister, who, on his departure for the Belgrade conference, observed that "Turkey is not neutral, but merely out of the war."

This blunt realism has caused irritation in both Yugoslavia and Rumania, which are doing their utmost under great difficulties to preserve an unquestionable neutrality. Yet the Turkish delegate has only called a spade by that precise name. Everybody knows that if the war spreads into southeastern Europe, Turkey and probably Greece will become involved on the Allied side. And everyone also knows that if this contingency should occur, Rumania, and possibly Yugoslavia as well, would be overrun by German troops.

It is this danger for all which provides such cohesive force as the Balkan Entente possesses. Unfortunately, however, a common danger does not of itself indicate a line of common policy. And that any satisfactory form of joint action can be sketched out during the meetings at Belgrade seems extremely unlikely.

The pressures which are now gathering strength, and which concentrate in particular on Rumania, are too great. It will be almost a miracle of statesmanship if that country can provide Germany with quantities of oil without incurring Allied hostility. And it will be equally a miracle if Rumania can withhold her invaluable supplies from the Reich and have such policy tolerated by Berlin.

The sympathy of neutrals everywhere will go out to the Balkan leaders, who, at Belgrade, are trying to insure the peace which they and their peoples so deeply desire. But sympathy with their problems will not obscure the moral which this conference evokes. The will for peace, unless coupled with unquestionable ability to resist aggression, is valueless. And the possession of resources coveted by an aggressive neighbor is itself, in our present era of enlightenment, sufficient to force an involvement which may be wholly contrary to national interests,

The Consumer Pays

As recently pointed out in these columns, the Washington milk industry is regulated chiefly in the interest of the dairy farmer. The Department of Agriculture order fixing minimum prices to be paid producers for milk has increased distributive costs, and the result is an increase of 3 cents per pint for cream sold in the District as well as an advance in the price of milk sold in adjacent Maryland.

Any possibility of a reduction of fluid milk retail prices in the District apparently vanished with the approval by Secretary Wallace of a special arrangement whereby milk for families on relief is to be provided at 5 cents per quart. This special rate is presumably an alternative to any general reduction of milk prices. In other words, Washington consumers are virtually taxed to cover the cost of the milk subsidy allowed families on relief.

The local milk situation emphasizes the truth of the axiom that no industry can function satisfactorily when it is partly regulated and partly free. The industry is admittedly "affected with a public interest" which requires a certain amount of regulation at the production end, in the interest of public health.

It is also in the public interest that the great body of consumers should receive the benefit of the lowest retail prices that are consonant with fair profits for the distributors. The consumer appears to be the forgotten man under the present system of partial regulation.

We keep seeing references to "an unimpeachable news source." Did anybody ever impeach a news source?

Anyway, the man who is eaten by cannibals doesn't have to listen to the after-dinner speech.

Kiss—140 Degrees F.?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under an Associated Press article dated January 25, printed in The Post there is this statement:

"A good, healthy kiss never spread any germs," said Dr. Katzoff, medical director and psychiatrist of the San Francisco Institute of Human Relations! "A genuine k.'s generates so much heat it destroys germs."

According to this article, the above statement was made because of the ban placed by University of California health officers on kissing after 18 students were stricken with mild cases of influenza.

According to Zinsser, A Textbook of Bacteriology, D. Appleton & Co., heating at 60 degrees centigrade will kill the influenza germs in a few minutes, or 140 degrees Fahrenheit. The normal temperature of the body is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. How can anyone by process of clear thinking and logic, suppose that a kiss will generate 140 degrees Fahrenheit? The source must be capable of possessing such a temperature, and I don't suppose the learned doctor will argue that individuals with known temperatures of 140 Fahrenheit have been known to exist, unless he refers to our so-called "hot-mommas."

The bacterial influenza is normally found in the mouth of healthy individuals and may be transmitted by kissing. In the act of kissing the lips are moistened by the saliva, and in the saliva there are the germs.

Germs become active in the body when one's resistance is low, and in times like these when we have extreme changes in the weather our bodies cannot adjust themselves quickly enough to accommodate these changes, and as a result, we become the prey of all kinds of diseases.

Stop kissing and you'll certainly not expose yourself to danger, at least in these times. In this respect man is enemy to man; witness the communicable diseases prevalent at all times. Weaken an enemy's resistance and the battle is won, and this is the truth of the progress of disease. "If you play with fire, you'll surely get burnt." This is not true of kissing of a dog, for, "Clean as a hound's tooth," is medically sound.

Snow Removal and Traffic Congestion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It's now just over a week since the "big snow"—9½ inches—hit Washington, and I am moved to a few comments and a criticism or two. In the first place, I think the past week has proven correct my suspicion that the "No Parking—Snow Removal" signs along sundry streets are simply a diabolical method of collecting tribute from unsuspecting and innocent motorists. (You're wrong; I have so far escaped their clutches.)

As proof of this, I cite just one of the numerous examples: Tenth street northwest, just above Constitution. The street is liberally plastered with the yellow signs (though why anyone should want to park there after 2 a. m. is beyond me), the plows have opened a narrow lane down the center of the street, leaving the windrow from the plow at least 8 feet from the curb, and as recently as this evening this space where cars might have parked is virgin snow, slightly soiled by now.

But that block could have been parked full of cars, and still they would not have interfered with the feeble plowing efforts, and they could have been left there for a week without preventing anyone else's parking, for the plow windrow effectively does that.

In the second place, the closing of the main thoroughfare through Rock Creek Park at the slightest sign of inclement weather is utterly incomprehensible to me. Massachusetts avenue, Connecticut avenue, and the parkway are taxed almost to capacity under the best circumstances, but comes a little snow to slow their regular traffic, and then throw the additional parkway load into them, and they become as impassable as the Maginot Line.

Granted that there may be a slight hazard at the sharp bend where the parkway enters the tunnel under Massachusetts avenue, I would much prefer to take my chances of skidding into the fence there, and getting downtown the same day I start out, than to rub edges off my fenders (and nerves), and then to die of starvation in the hopless snarl of buses, trams, and justly irritated motorists on Connecticut avenue.

My suggestion for the immediate relief of this problem would be to keep the parkway open at all times excepting when the tunnel is actually flooded and impassable. A couple of loads of sand could be spared from the more level spots on Connecticut avenue, and the cost of spreading it at the tunnel entrance shouldn't be so terribly much higher than on the avenue. If a tremendous hazard still were deemed to exist at that turn, a couple of cops could be stationed above the tunnel to stop every car and warn the absent-minded that there was a down-hill turn ahead.

And now I'd like to stick my neck out and make a long-range suggestion for the elimination of the Massachusetts avenue tunnel bottleneck. I've heard rumors of a plan to remove entirely the earth fill at that point, and carry the avenue across a broadened park on a handsome bridge; dandy, but expensive. At half the cost, the parkway could be swung out over the stream above and below the tunnel, to eliminate the sharp curves, and carried through the tunnel on a pile- or pier-supported structure a few feet above its present elevation.

This would restore to the creek the full width of the tunnel—almost double its present width—and also allow the parkway to be three, possibly four, lanes wide through the tunnel, directly over the stream. This full-tunnel-width roadway would, of course, be subject to occasional flooding by the stream, as the present road now is, but the flooding would not be as frequent as at present, for the stream would have the full width of the tunnel, and also would have to rise higher to reach the new roadway . . . Come on, let's have the arguments against this scheme—from others than the dirt-haulers and the bridge-builders, I mean.

As to the snow-removal problem, that's already been pretty well settled, on paper, I think. Just let's try to remind the powers next time it snows to get out with the plows in the middle of the night, if need be, to do the plowing before the morning rush packs it down, and makes its removal impossible.

Musicians' Salaries

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. T. E. Towers, in deciding "to find out what the score, really was" regarding wages paid National Symphony players, states that he contacted the symphony headquarters.

Why didn't Mr. Towers also contact the musicians' union and some of the players?—then he would have obtained an unfogged picture of the situation.

If it is true—I am quoting Mr. Towers' figures—that $1,360 is the lowest amount paid an orchestra player, then 80 musicians are drawing $108,800 a year, practically the entire symphony's budget of $110,000, leaving less than $2,000 for Kindler and administrative expenses.

Mr. Towers states that the musicians of the St. Louis Symphony get only $20 more per man than musicians of the local orchestra. Living conditions in St. Louis are much lower than in the Nation's Capital. Besides, St. Louis has never enjoyed a reputation for high wages.

True, a few Washington musicians may augment their niggardly incomes by teaching or playing in a theater. What theater? Only two theaters in the city employ musicians. There is, however, other work our musicians might do; deliver ice and sell vacuum cleaners—work some violinists were forced to do a few summers ago when the music lovers of Washington found it exceedingly difficult to raise enough money to keep the orchestra from foundering.

I believe that Mr. Towers is only one of a small minority that believes $26 per week a decent wage for a musician—or any man for that matter. If Mr. Towers is supporting a family on $26 per week, perhaps he will be so kind as to tell Post readers just how he does it. Yours, BENJAMIN DUCK.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why is it that T. E. Towers and your other correspondents who air their views in connection with the controversy in regard to salaries of members of the National Symphony Orchestra avoid any mention of the compensation received by the conductor? J. W. MACKENZIE.

Socialist Party Appeal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The disappointment of the Negro in the New Deal was voiced by H. J. Ford in a recent letter. Both the Democratic and Republican parties have failed to offer any effective solution of Negro problems. That is because the problems of the Negro are part and parcel of those of the working man.

Since both old parties get their campaign funds from bankers, landlords and corporations, the class interests of these elements only are represented by the old-line parties.

But the Negro does have a place to go on the political front. The Socialist Party offers a program of immediate objectives which accepts the Negro on a plane of equality with whites. The Socialist Party offers an ultimate goal in which social injustice and minority exploitation cease to be inherent in the arrangement of the social structure.

The Negro should unite with his white brother-worker in a party of his own—the Socialist Party.

The Post Impressionist

Out of Harness

Hooray! I am on the "Retired List"—I am free! The waves of time have washed me up into a sheltered cove, and the ebb tide has gone out with all the noise and strife, the struggle and fight for place, the competition of youth and strength.

Now I can be as old as I am, do as I please, thumb my nose at the powers that were, I can shed the "cheerful smile" I have worn for 40 years, put away corset and curlers. Oh, it is a grand and glorious feeling to know that I do not have to please anyone but myself, that I am no longer a slave to bells and schedules. I can stay in bed as long as I please and need not go out in stormy weather. I can sit by the window, watch the snow fall and see others plod through the sleet and slush.

Never again will I have to climb the stairs to Room 4, adjust the shades, put the day's program on the blackboard, get out the needed materials, and be ready for the lusty troop of boys and girls.

And never again will I have to breathe schoolroom air. For no matter how modern the schoolhouse may be, with ventilators and air conditioning, the air is always characteristically schoolroomish with the blended breath of 40 or 50 children exuding onions, boiled cabbage, and what-have-you. On rainy days add to this the smell of wet shoe leather, and damp woolen clothing. Then there are coughs and sneezes, and always chalk dust, fluff from clothing, and the dust from the tramping of feet on wearing floors. Any teacher knows the schoolroom aroma.

Years ago when I had finished a course in a very sketchy normal school I got a position in the schools of a Midwest town. At that time there was no tenure of office and teachers must be rehired each year. There were always plenty of applicants for these positions and the daughters of the town were on the preferred list, so you see a teacher must watch her steps and win the approval of the children, their parents, the superintendent, the supervising principal, the critic teacher, the members of the school board, and last but not least the wives of the trustees—or else.

Because of sister Anne, who was ill, I felt I must keep my job, for the salary of $50 a month for nine months of the year meant the food we ate, the clothes we wore, and the payments on the cottage we were buying. So I tried to be a model. I went to church, taught a Sunday-school class, was secretary for the Woman's Reading Club, and ditto for a missionary society. I was patronized and pitied as a poor old maid; but I walked along in traditional teacher manner when I felt I must kick up my heels and trill out cuss words at the patronizers I despised and secretly looked upon as "trash."

Teaching would be ideal work if a teacher could be free. Free to carry out her own ideas, unhampered by uniformity of methods and results.

The task of those who train the young is to find the good in them and cultivate it, and soft pedal the bad; so that each child may become his best self. This could be more easily accomplished if the teacher had fewer pupils and could have the care of them longer than a year.

In my long teaching career I have seen methods come and go. At one time reading was taught by learning the alphabet; this was succeeded by the word method, then came the flash cards and sentences, and then phonics, when the 6-year-olds hissed like geese to get the sound of S, and chugged like engines to learn Ch, and so on down the list of letter sounds. I never did know how mooing like cows and grunting like pigs could teach reading. Then came dramatization; children never read aloud; they must make a play of the story they read and act it out.

There were methods of writing, also. One script would be favored this year, but the next an altogether different copybook must be used.

With arithmetic—do you remember the Spear blocks? I often wonder whatever became of them.

There was the era of sand tables, and what a waste of time this was! Children were supposed to illustrate lessons with them, but the teachers did most of the work—or the sly—and kept them in order until the supervisor had seen them.

Then came "motivated activities," where each youngster, in free time, got up and did whatever he had a yen for. One boy might be hammering in nails, building a house out of orange crates; others painting a mural, having a fine time daubing one another with color; some were working with clay, pounding it with gusto.

In another corner of the room a play was being rehearsed. Some of the children were distracted with the general hubbub and it is a wonder that the poor woman in charge was not a raving maniac.

For a time "socialized recitations," where children taught the classes, were in vogue, then everything swept to "correlation." A very pretty system was worked out, each grade to have it's special subjects—for instance, the second grade must study Indians and all other work of a semester must correlate with this; they must sing Indian songs, play Indian games, wear Indian bonnets—which they made, bring bed sheets from home to make Indian teepees, then paint these with Indian designs—this was a messy performance as more paint gets in the hair, on the clothes, and on the floor than on the sheets.

But in spite of all drawbacks the teaching profession gives one an inner satisfaction and joy that only those who have been real teachers can understand. "MISS MARY."

Hoover Sees Pestilence

Famines Visioned

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 2.—Former President Hoover declared tonight that if the war were long drawn-out the United States would "need to meet the question of famine and pestilence over the whole of Europe."

He said that but for American food and American relief in 1918 "famine, pestilence and communism would have engulfed Europe."

In a speech prepared for the Overseas Press Club of America, Mr. Hoover urged that this country remain at peace because "the chance for civilization in Europe to come back again may depend upon America."

Appealing for funds to "meet the heartbreaking needs of Finland and Poland," he said the United States had a food surplus out of which "we can furnish the little nations without depriving our own people of one atom."

Sees Moral Duty To Succor Starving

"I DO NOT believe," he added, "that as a Christian Nation or as a Nation loving liberty, we have any moral right to stand by with these large surpluses of food and see people starve wholesale, who are helpless to help themselves."

"And more especially is this true if they are victims of aggression, if they are dying on their frontiers fighting for their independence and fighting for the survival of human liberty in the world. We have more than enough to supply our own people."

The former President began his address with the declaration that "the four horsemen of the Apocalypse have now become nine."

These, he added, were:

"Imperialism, the destroyer of the independence of nations.

"Intolerance, the destroyer of minorities.

"Statism, the destroyer of personal liberty.

"Atheism, the destroyer of faith.

Famine Inevitable In War's Wake

"AND HATE, THE destroyer of the unity of mankind.

"After them ride war and death. And finally there sweep famine and pestilence."

Mr. Hoover limited his speech to a discussion of these latter "horsemen," saying that if the war was a long one its "one inevitable end" would be famine and that pestilence would follow.

"Now America has a role to perform," he added. " . . . If we shall remain out of these wars, if we have maintained our economic and moral strength, we may be the means by which the world will have a chance to recover from these horsemen. If we join in these wars and exhaust our strength, there will be no one to do it."

The "immediate job" as to Polish and Finnish relief, he said, was to provide to those peoples about $30,000,000 worth of American surplus food.

GOP May Be Forced to Hold Convention First

An increasing number of Democrats are seeking to force Republicans to hold their national convention first—and Republican leaders conceded yesterday the effort might be successful.

Several Senate Democrats said their party's national committee should take no action on a convention date when it meets Monday, but should turn the job over to a subcommittee. The subcommittee could delay picking a date until after the Republican National Committee meeting February 16 and hence could choose a later one than that selected by the G. O. P.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, assistant minority leader, told reporters yesterday that while it would be preferable for his party to meet after the Democrats, "it will be all over if the Democrats appoint a subcommittee to choose the date."

"The Democrats, with their organization already built, can outwait the Republicans," he said.

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, expressed the same view.

William J. Kelly, vice president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, expressed confidence here yesterday that Chicago would "get both the Democratic and Republican national conventions.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Across The Rubicon

ON JANUARY 26, when our treaty relations with Japan came to an end, we crossed the Rubicon which separates diplomacy that relies on legal argument from diplomacy in which measures, actual or threatened, become part of the discussion. The country, apparently, has not yet understood how serious this is; for nothing spectacular has happened since January 26.

Nevertheless, the situation in the Pacific is changed. Not only have Japan and the United States taken positions that are exceedingly difficult to reconcile but there has been removed the barrier which prevented their conflict of interests and ideals from being brought to a show-down until there had elapsed a compulsory cooling-off period of six months.

This situation, it will be recalled, was percipitated by the Vandenberg resolution of July 18 last. For the sake of the record it may be useful to reprint the text of the Vandenberg resolution (S. Res. 166).

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the Government of the United States should give Japan the six months' notice required by the treaty of 1911 for its abrogation, so that the Government of the United States may be free to deal with Japan in the formulation of a new treaty and in the protection of American interests as new necessities may require.

"Resolved further, That it is the sense of the Senate that the Government of the United States should ask that the Conference of Brussels of 1937, now in recess, should be reassembled to determine, pursuant to the express provisions of the Nine Power Treaty of Washington of 1922, whether Japan has been and is violating said treaty, and to recommend the appropriate course to be pursued by the signatories."

Japan Violated Treaty Of 1922

THIS RESOLUTION, as Senator Vandenberg points out and as everyone knows, was not approved by the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs. But a canvass of the committee showed that it was favorable to the sense of the resolution, and a few days later the State Department served the notice of abrogation upon Japan. Senator Vandenberg publicly applauded the action and was widely praised in the newspapers for having taken a strong line.

The Vandenberg resolution is still the most concise statement available of the policy which led to the present situation. The reader will note that the resolution contains two parts, the first calling for the abrogation of the commercial treaty of 1911, the second for collective action to uphold the Nine Power Treaty of 1922.

Now, it must be remembered that the American dispute with Japan does not turn on the matters covered by the commercial treaty of 1911. There was no need to abrogate that treaty as such. The dispute turns on the political treaty of 1922 which Japan has violated. If Senator Vandenberg's resolution had any meaning, it meant that the commercial treaty should be abrogated in order to induce Japan to negotiate about the political treaty. Everybody knows that this is what it meant. This is what the State Department meant when it acted on the sense of the Senator's resolution.

To this action on our part Mr. Arita, the foreign minister, replied this week in a speech to the Japanese Diet. Mr. Arita's language is moderate and courteous. But his position is uncompromising in that he is unwilling even to consider the possibility that the United States, or any of the other signatories of the Nine Power Treaty, has any right to be heard on the question of the territorial integrity and political independence of China. He assures us that when Japan has completed and consolidated her dominion in China, Americans will be permitted to trade in China. But in a polite and uncompromising way, he lets us know that we cannot even discuss the conquest of China or the Japanese empire which is being founded by that conquest.

A Two-Power Dispute Over Nine-Power Treaty

THIS LEAVES US in a position which may, I think, be defined as follows: We have ended our commercial treaty relations with Japan in order to induce Japan, under the pressure which we are now legally free to apply, to agree that the substance of the Nine Power Treaty of 1922 is negotiable. We are not insisting on the letter of the treaty but upon our right to negotiate about it. Of the other signatories besides Japan and the United States, one is China herself. The other six are Great Britain and France which are at war in Europe, another is Italy which has recognized Japan's conquest, the others are small European neutrals. Thus we find ourselves engaged in a two-power dispute with Japan over the substance of a nine-power treaty. Whether or not this was foreseen or intended last July by Senator Vandenberg, the Senate committee, and by the State Department, this is the consequence.

It is a situation in which none of the alternatives is agreeable. What we should like to do, of course, is to wait until a victory of the Allies in Europe makes it possible for the British and French to return to the Far East and thus to reestablish a practical basis for a general negotiation. But the Japanese see this even more clearly than we do, and, therefore, it is in the highest degree unlikely that they will allow things to drag along until the end of the European war. If the Allies are going to win, the Japanese must be so firmly established in China that they cannot be dislodged except by a war for which the Allies, even as victors, will have no stomach. If the Allies are going to lose, or are going to fail to win, the Japanese must exploit the opportunity which they would find in the catastrophic anarchy that would then exist all over the world.

So, though we may wish to wait, it will be prudent to assume that Japan will be moving rapidly, and that once the stalemate ends in Europe, the Japanese will move decisively. Something of this sort must have been in Mr. Arita's mind when he declared that the effect in Asia of the European war would be "tremendous."

Unenforced Threat Declared Hazardous

THE INCONVENIENT part for us is that, having ended our treaty relations for the purpose of impressing the Japanese, we shall become increasingly unimpressive if they now go forward to do everything to which we object. We have threatened to act, and in foreign relations where the vital interests of great powers are involved, a threat which is not carried out may be quite as dangerous as one which is carried out. It would be as dangerous to let the Japanese army think we are pacifist bluffers as it was to let Ribbentrop and Hitler think the British were pacifist bluffers: it may incite them to do things that the American nation would find intolerable.

On the other hand, in carrying out a threat against a great power there is always the likelihood of reprisal, and that makes war a real possibility. So when there is involved something as great as China is to Japan, a threat is either a bluff which, when called, incites to greater aggression; or it is not a bluff but an act which, when resented, may result in war.

Let no one think there is any cheap and comfortable way out of this dilemma. The fact is that it is a dilemma which cannot be resolved by running away from the Japanese and must not be resolved by running head on into them. How, then, can it be resolved? The answer is that it cannot be resolved as long as we make the pretensions of a great power in world politics and at the same time conduct ourselves as if we were a feeble, little nation.

Leaders Must Realize Atlantic Ocean Peril

IT CANNOT be resolved until men with influence and responsibility, like Senator Vandenberg, realizes that the United States lies in two oceans, and learn to think of our security with a mind that remembers always the two oceans. The historians of the future will consider it one of the classic ironies of history that on the eve of a great war, the United States was precipitated by "isolationist" leaders into challenging the vital interests of a great power, and then induced by these same leaders to believe that it could safely deal with the consequences in one ocean regardless of what happened in the other.

It will be no secret to the Japanese that the United States can take no risks in the Pacific Ocean, certainly no risk that could possibly lead to war, as long as the outcome of the naval war in the Atlantic is in doubt. To become involved in the Orient without absolute certainty that the Atlantic Ocean is securely in the hands of our friends would be to commit the unpardonable blunder of advancing into danger without safeguarding our rear. And since the Japanese know this, we shall soon find that we have entered a period when, for our safety and our self-respect, we shall need more competent leadership than we are now getting from Washington.

Lippmann Warns Vandenberg Of Catastrophe In Far East

Columnist Addresses Senator, as One Who May Have Highest Authority, In Reply to Statement on Japan Pact

Walter Lippmann, special writer for The Washington Post, has informed Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, that "I am seriously concerned with the extremely dangerous position we have gotten into in the Far East, a position which, in my opinion, may become catastrophic."

Mr. Lippmann stated his views in a letter dated January 31, in reply to a letter of January 30 from Senator Vandenberg in which the latter took issue with some observations on the Far Eastern question in Lippmann's column last Tuesday.

The complete text of Lippmann's letter follows:

My Dear Senator Vandenberg:

Thank you for your letter of January 30th. I appreciate the trouble you have taken to make clear your own position. The situation which confronts us all now is so grave that I feel justified in imposing on your time by making some observations about your letter.

First, as to whether it is historically correct to say that your resolution "precipitated the situation in which we now find ourselves." You say that the committee rejected your resolution and that the State Department acted immediately upon the heels of this rejection. Am I wrong in thinking that the Stae Department the State Department acted immediately upon the heels of this rejection. Am I wrong in thinking that the State Department acted because it knew that it had the support of the committee? Though I cannot put my hands on the clipping at this moment, I think I a right in recalling that you publicly applauded the action of the State Department. I did not say it was "controlled" by your initiative but I think I am right in supposing that it would not have acted so promply if it had known that you and the committee favored serving notice on Japan. However, as you say, all of this is of no particular moment as regards the problem itself, since it is agreed that notice of the termination of the treaty was served with your approval and without, as far as I can remember, any objection by your associates on the committee.

Second, in discussing the consequences of this momentous event, I discuss not your attitudes and purposes, but the terms of the resolution itself. You are well aware that in matters of this sort the intention is not what counts. You say that the author of the resolution did not intend that its "automatic purpose" was to "free us to apply a one-sided embargo." I was careful to note in my article that you yourself do not accept that interpretation, but I do not see how you can escape the responsibility for the interpretation that was universally placed upon it.

Third, I am unable to agree with your statement that the resolution is not concerned with opposition to the Japanese conquest of China. The second part of the resolution, dealing with the nine power treaty, can have no other meaning, it seems to me, for the language employed to express such a meaning.

Fourth, your letter of August 7th to Mr. Hull expresses a hope which I am sure is shared by every sensible man, but there is some ambiguity in it. You say that your purpose is to enact "a new treaty with Japan in the light of 1939 realties." Were you referring to the commercial treaty or to the nine power treaty? If you were referring only to the commercial treaty, what was the matter with it? If you were referring to the nine power treaty of 1922, is it not evident that the only purpose in abrogating the commercial treaty of 1911 was to put pressure on Japan to negotiate with us about the matters dealt with in the nine power treaty? The matters dealt with in the nine power treaty, as you well know, concern not our limited rights, but the constitution of China.

Fifth, in referring to your request that the Brussels conference be called together in order to decide whether Japan had violated the nine power treaty, and to recommend the course to be pursued, you must have recognized, it seems to me, that this was collective action and that the effectiveness of the collective action would depend upon our associates in that action. I do not understand the reasoning by which you could at the same time take the risk of grave entanglement in the Far East and the risk of denying to the nations whose assistance we should need if it ever came to war there, the right to purchase arms.

I do not raise the question in order to rake over the embers of an old controversy, but because I am seriously concerned with the extremely dangerous position we have gotten into in the Far East, a position which, in my opinion, may become catastrophic.

I do not feel that I have assigned to you a place of undue prominence in our Far Eastern policy. I regard you as a very prominent man who may in a very short time have the highest responsibility in this country, and what you do and what you think, I therefore take very seriously. But always I take it with great good will towards you personally.

Sincerely yours,

WALTER LIPPMANN.

Party Mechanisms

By Mark Sullivan

Democratic Committee To Meet

MONDAY, February 5, the Democratic National Committee meets in Washington. The national committee, in both great parties, is an important mechanism in America's process of government. Party mechanisms tend to become more important in proportion as the country cleaves more and more to the idea of party government—two-party government.

Increasingly, efforts to go counter to the two-party system are checked and fail. The notion of a third party is in lower estate today than for many years. In the most recent national elections, those for Congress in 1938 and in the State elections the same year, third parties were almost wiped out. The La Follettes' National Progressive Party, which in one form or another had dominated Wisconsin for more than a generation—and which in 1937 had ambitiously announced it was going to be a Nation-wide party—the National Progressive Party was overwhelmingly rejected in the 1938 election. Much the same happened to the other third party of the Northwest, the Farmer-Labor Party. The third party of any pretension, the American Labor Party in New York City and State, cast less than 10 per cent of the vote of the State in 1938.

Evidently America means to be a two-party country. In proportion as we cleave to this idea and strengthen it, the institutions of party management—such as the Democratic National Committee (and also the Republican)—become more important, more necessary to be understood.

How Parties Choose National Committees

THE DEMOCRATIC National Committee (and also the Republican) is chosen mainly in this way: Every four years, in Presidential years, there are in each State, primary elections—that is, elections in which only members of the respective parties vote. In these primary elections, the members of the party elect delegates to the national convention—delegates who shall compose the convention, and who shall nominate the candidate of the party for President.

When the national convention meets, the delegates from each State hold a separate State caucus. At this caucus each State delegation elects two persons who shall be the State's members on the national committee for the ensuing four years. Thus the national committee consists of two members, a man and a woman, from each State, Territory and dependency.

(The method is roughly the same in both parties. From the method as here described there are some variations. In some States, delegates to the national convention are selected, not in primaries but in party conventions. In a few States, members of the national committee are elected directly by the voters in the primaries.)

IT WILL THUS be seen that the 110 men and women who meet in Washington Monday, the Democratic National Committee, are an important body, having a responsible function in the American process of government. It is selected by a representative process, grounded upon popular suffrage. It is the governing body of the party—so to speak, its board of directors. The main purpose of its meeting Monday is to arrange for a national convention, choose the time and city, and determine other details. In short, to arrange for selecting the party's next nominee for the Presidency.

To arrange for selecting—but not to select. It is not the business of the national committee, as a body, to make a choice for the Presidential nomination, nor have a favorite. That would be improper. As Mr. Will Hays, once head of the Republican National Committee, used to say: "It is the business of the National Committee to elect its Presidential candidate, not select him." Individual members of the committee may and will have personal choices—but not the committee as a body.

Yet there is one thing the committee as a body will feel they ought to know, and will be inconvenienced if they do not know. It is a thing which every individual on the committee, as an individual, will wish most desperately to know, in order to guide himself in his own State. All will want to know whether President Roosevelt is a candidate to succeed himself. If the committee chose, it would be justified in assuming that of course Mr. Roosevelt will not try to succeed himself. That is the rule, a tradition so strong as to have almost the effect of law. Never in either party for 60 years has a President serving his second term tried to succeed himself.

Suspense To Remain On Third-Term Issue

BUT APPARENTLY the Democratic National Committee is not to know Mr. Roosevelt's intention. Apparently he will neither tell them his intentions—nor give them a reason for keeping them in suspense. When they meet he will be at Hyde Park. He expects to return to Washington—so he told his press conference—on Tuesday, in time for the members of the committee, after they have concluded their work, to file through his office and shake hands with him. That sort of ceremony permits no opportunity for asking confidential questions.

Possibly some member, filing through, may pause long enough for a facetiousness which Mr. Roosevelt does not resent but encourages. A member might point out that Mr. Roosevelt spent ground-hog day at Hyde Park; and might inquire whether Mr. Roosevelt watched the ground hogs on his estate—and whether the groundhogs' survey of conditions led them to conclude to emerge and be active or to return to their dens for a further period of hibernation.

Senate to Quiz Officers on Marine Corps Promotions

Ranking officers of the Navy and Marine Corps will be called before a special Senate naval subcommittee next week for questioning on Marine promotion procedure, Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, said yesterday.

Gillette said Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of Marines, and several officers who had not been picked for promotion by the last selection board would be called for testimony Tuesday.

Later, Secretary Edison and Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Navy personnel chief, will appear.

Gillette said one of the charges was that the brigadier generals on selection boards might choose mediocre colonels over the heads of outstanding ones, because once promoted they would compete with the brigadiers themselves for advancement to major general.

SEC to Inquire Into Bank Fee In Bond Sale

The Securities Commission yesterday called a hearing to determine the propriety of an $80,000 fee allegedly paid by the Northern Natural Gas Co. to Dillon, Reed & Co. for handling the sale of $16,000,000 worth of bonds last August.

The commission, which reserved jurisdiction about payment of the fee when it permitted the bonds of the Midwestern pipeline firm to be sold, said that the hearing, on March 4, would determine whether the New York banking firm got the fee after "arm's length bargaining."

Utilizing a section of the 1935 public utility holding company act designed to prevent payment of improper fees by utilities to their bankers, the commission also is investigating whether other recent utility financing was acquired by bankers at "arm's length bargaining."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Tough Winters

Elmer Twitchell, noted weather expert, linguist and international 165-pound bingo champ, is up in the air over all the fuss made about this being a tough winter. "The people who are calling this a hard winter are either liars or softies or both," he declared with typical restraint. "I do not consider a winter is really a winter when a man doesn't have to carry a blowtorch to keep his breath from freezing.

"In all the recent squawking about severe weather I did not hear of a single case where the furnace froze solid. In the winters when I was a boy it was common for the furnace flame to congeal and freeze into a solid mass. Many a cold morning I have gone down into the cellar and piled hot-water bottles around the coals to thaw them out!

"And what about skiing? Why, when I was a lad I have with my own eyes seen ski jumpers come to a stop halfway down a hill, their skis frozen to the slide. It once happened to me, and I was on that slide four days and five nights before they could free me.

"Luke Stewky, our middleweight ski champion of those days, once took off and had leaped about 50 yards when he was seen to come to a stop in midair. It was one of the strangest sights I ever saw. There was Luke frozen solid in the atmosphere. He didn't come down until spring!

"Central Park was thick with figure skaters, stiff and immobile from mid-December until St. Patrick's Day. Personally, I thought it was a good idea, too.

"I remember a big fire in the Flatiron Building, which then stood where the Aquarium is today. The firemen had no sooner turned hose onto the building than the stream froze solid from hose to building. Every attempt to break that stream failed until about April 1, when they got P. T. Barnum to send over a herd of elephants to walk across it. Even then they only cracked the ice a little. It was May 10 before they got the stream free from the building. I never did know what became of the building."

"How cold did it get that year?" Mr. Twitchell was asked.

"Nobody could tell. All the thermometers blew to pieces the second day of the cold wave. Ships were frozen to the docks until late spring. Hot Springs froze over solidly. Jacksonville had a blizzard that lasted four days, the press agent of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce was buried too deep in the snow to challenger a boast from Miami that it hadn't had more than 6 inches of ice all winter, and down at New Orleans the horses froze in the stretch run the third day of the winter meeting and didn't cross the finish line for seven weeks."

"The horses down there are a little faster now," we suggested.

"A very little," admitted Elmer.

To the Earth

She deserves the peace. Older than old,
She has given up her blood of gold.
Calloused by the hand of ages,
Torn by wars the weather wages,
And blind by staring at the sun,
She mourns what fruit her labors won.
She nurtured every living root
She bore each spring in panic mute.
And now with snow upon her breast
Deserves the peace. Oh, give her rest!

Ash Wednesday Services Will Usher In Lent

Many of Tomorrow's Programs Will Dwell On Season's Meaning

Solemn and impressive church services on Ash Wednesday this week will usher in one of the most sacred periods of Christendom—Lent. Many of tomorrow's services will give the meaning of the season. Commemorating the miraculous fast of Jesus when he was faced with temptation in the desert, Lent precedes Easter by 40 days, not counting Sundays. The name has its derivation from lengtentide, Saxon term for spring.

The period originally began on what is now the first Sunday in Lent, but when it was deemed advisable to omit Sundays in the calculation because of the impropriety of fasting on that day, there remained only 36 days. Pope Gregory then decreed it should fall four days earlier.

The name of Ash Wednesday was derived from a notable ceremony of the Roman Church. At the commencement of the penitential season, the faithful were reminded that they were but dust and ashes, the priests first blessing and sprinkling holy water on ashes.

"Into Dust Will Return"

Worshipers then approached in sackcloth; the priest put the ashes on his finger tips, and made the mark of the cross on the worshiper's forehead, saying in Latin, "Remember, man, that you are of ashes and into dust will return."

The ashes generally came from palms consecrated on the previous year's Palm Sunday, but in England shortly after the Reformation, the use of ashes was discontinued. However, Catholics and Episcopal churches still observe the custom.

As in previous years, local churches will be sponsoring both joint and individual Lenten services, climaxed by the Good Friday rites.

The Washington Federation of Churches will sponsor services each Wednesday during Lent at 4:45 p. m. at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G street northwest. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will preach on Ash Wednesday.

Weekday Services Planned

An annual Lenten custom, the services are open to the public, and always draw worshipers of many nationalities and creeds.

The Southeast Inter-Church Council, composed of nine Protestant churches of six denominations in that community, will sponsor weekday services at noon daily, except Saturdays, at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, beginning this Wednesday. Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, will lead the initial rites.

The District Federation of Luther Leagues will hold a pre-Lenten service tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. at Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol street. Dr. Amos J. Traver, of Frederick, Md., president of the Maryland Synod of the United Lutheran Church, and former executive secretary of the Luther League of America, will speak.

Assisting in the service will be John Bittenbender, president of the United Lutheran Federation; Vincent Gingerich, president of the American Lutheran Federation, and William Zeller, president of the Conference of Luther Clubs of the District.

Mission Board Official to Speak At Cleveland Park

First—Beginning a series of Lenten sermons on "Christian Ways of Facing Inevitable Experiences," Dr. Howard Stone Anderson will preach at 11 a. m. on "Growing Up and Growing Old."

Lincoln (colored) — "Unforgotten Moments" will be Dr. R. W. Brooks' 11 a. m. sermon topic.

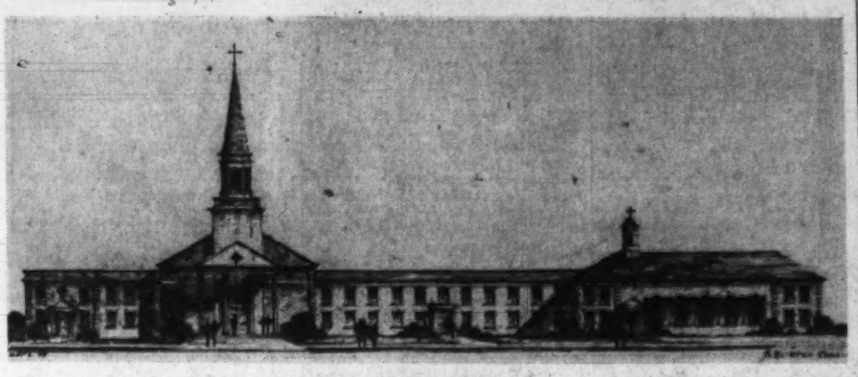
E. Washington Heights Baptists to Break Ground Soon for Educational Addition



The proposed new $37,000 educational building, as envisioned by E. Burton Corning, architect, is in the center with the present church building on the right. The proposed auditorium is on the left

By Robert Tate Allan

East Washington Heights Baptist Church, thriving Southeast congregation, soon will turn the first earth for its new $37,000 educational unit, The Post learned yesterday.

Expected to be among the most beautiful and best-equipped buildings of its kind in Washington, the structure will have accommodations for more than 600 scholars, with some 40 classrooms provided. Each department will have assembly room space.

The Rev. Glenn Faucett, pastor since 1929, explained yesterday that the new unit will join the present church auditorium at Branch and Alabama avenues. Conforming in style to the latter, it will be of Early Virginia Colonial type.

The present church edifice was built in 1935 at a cost of $22,000 and paid for in three years. A larger church auditorium will be erected in the future should the need arise.

Plans for financing the project are in the hands of a building fund committee, headed by Milton A. Talbert, assisted by Clifford and Harry Jenkins, brothers. The building committee includes Clifford Jenkins, chairman; C. J. Gilbert, C. I. Smith, Mrs. J. A. West and Mr. Talbert.

According to the clergyman, active worker in city-wide Baptist activities, his congregation will finance the project by raising $5,000 annually in cash and pledges. A "Loyalty Campaign" was conducted last October, resulting in a substantial amount being donated. E. Burton Corning is architect.

The Sunday school expansion has been necessitated by the remarkable growth of the congregation, worshiping in one of Washington's most rapidly developing sections. Now engaged in a community religious survey, the church is concentrating this month on the new Skyland division at Twenty-fifth street and Good Hope road.

The membership committee, led by James Richards, is cooperating with the Workers' Council in executing a program in which weekly contacts are made with present and prospective church members. Comprising officers and teachers of the Sunday school, the council is led by Clifford Jenkins, superintendent of the Sunday school.

Boasting a colorful history, East Washington Heights Church had its inception about 1890, when a group of Sunday school students assembled in the home of David C. Fountain, guiding spirit behind the formation of other churches "across the river."

Formal organization of a church came in 1894, the congregation meeting in a chapel on the present site. Many old-timers among the parishioners frequently refer to it as "the little white church on the hill where city and country meet." Still standing, the old chapel is used for auxiliary space.

Part-time spiritual leaders served the congregation until the coming of the Rev. James W. Many in 1897. He served for 32 years—one of the longest pastorates in local church history.

The Rev. Mr. Faucett, who assumed charge in 1929 after a successful ministry in New York State, is extremely proud of the progress which has been made by his local congregation, especially the Sunday school, supervised by Mr. Jenkins.

The school supports a missionary in Burma, assists in the new building program, and cooperates in divers other ways toward development of a greater East Washinbton Heights Church.

Among leaders of the church school are Mrs. Clifford Jenkins, Mrs. Wilson Smith, Kenneth Talbert, departmental superintendent; William Prohaska, president, of the Men's Bible Class, of which C. I. Smith and John W. Martin are teachers, and the Women's Class, led by Mrs. Edward Smith.

Mrs. Faucett is supervisor of a teachers' training course being started this month by the Sunday school.

Other organization leaders are Miss Virginia Owens, president of the senior Baptist Young People's Union, and Mrs. Stanley Gilbert and Mrs. R. L. Jenkins, counselors of the Intermediate and Junior B. Y. P. U. groups; Louis Strohecker and Miss Ruth Jenkins, leader and organist of the choir, respectively.

Musically inclined, the pastor stresses the importance of music in church and Sunday school programs, and several months ago presided over exercises dedicating memorial chimes, which can be heard for blocks around by use of amplifiers.

In addition to Sundays, the chimes are heard during the midweek devotionals on Thursdays, when congregational groups alternate in conducting worship programs.

The pastor will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Principles of Religious Freedom," as his congregation joins in the local observance of a Nation-wide celebration of "Baptist World Alliance Sunday." At 8 p. m. he will begin a series about great figures of the Bible who rise above the crowd, speaking on "The Man Who Didn't Know Where He was Going."

Native of Savona, N. Y., where he received his early education, Mr. Faucett was graduated from Colgate University divinity school in 1927, receiving his master's degree in 1928. His first pastorates were in Columbus Quarter and South Edmonston, N. Y.

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"MY FAITH LOOKS UP TO THEE"
*Rev. Ray Palmer
"My faith looks up to Thee,
Thou Lamb of Calvary,
Saviour divine,
Now hear me when I pray,
Take all my guilt away,
O let me from this day,
Be wholly Thine."
*The Rev. Ray Palmer wrote this hymn while recovering from an illness, immediately after his graduation from Yale College. It expresses a deep dependence upon God. As he states, he wrote the verses with tender emotion and ended the last line with tears.

28 Nurses in Airline's Largest Class For Stewardesses

Alice Hughes

IT WAS NOT long ago that a nurse was a person who felt the pulse, took the temperature and was generally helpful to the sick, lame and lazy.

Fortunately, those times are long since passed. Only the other day 28 trained nurses entered the largest class of stewardesses that an American airline has ever trained. That will give any woman an idea why a nurse's training is not in vain.

A few days ago I met a trained nurse who has entered an entirely new field. Her name is Anne Goodrich, whose specialty now is photographing the work of her kind and the surgeons who perform intricate and important operations. Miss Anne is now enjoying an exhibition of her work at a local gallery, and it is well worth a visit for many laymen. Not only does Miss Goodrich take still pictures, but she also experiments with movie film, and one of the results of this has been shown with excellent results at the Yale School of Nursing.

After hearing these things about Miss Goodrich, you might get the idea that she is a very dull and plodding person. On the contrary, she is an extremely attractive young woman, and has taken up this specialized subject because she realized its need. She is a graduate of a northeastern college school of nursing of 1926, and since then has studied her art at Simmons College, Iowa, and has practiced it in a hospital in China. All this time she has learned the delicacies of her work as a nurse, and now is extraordinarily competent, both as a nurse and as a trained photographer of her art.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Among the musical evenings I have spent lately, which are more than any normal content, was a recital by the prettiest cellist now living, a Russian girl by the name of Raya Garbousava, who has finally caught on in this country after many years of study and practice. Her audience at Town Hall was not only large, but was filled with the musical great and their consorts. I noticed in the crowd Mrs. Jascha Heifetz, who was the Florence Vidor, one of the loveliest of the silent film stars and who, even today, is one of the loveliest women I know.

Another beautiful woman in that Town Hall crowd was Colette d'Arville, the French singer, who came with Martinelli, the French and Italian wheelhorse of the Metropolitan Opera. Watching Garbousava play, I rembered the fun she and I had had when we went shopping for her first American concert dress, whose skirt had to be yards wide, to accommodate the cello in her lap. Raya has been playing concerts for many years, patiently doing concerts to small houses, then larger, until now at her latest there were no empty seats.

Every day, at my favorite Algonquin Hotel, there is an egg dish on the menu. Innkeeper Frank Case has his chef, Otto Schmuck, concoct them because it happens that I and many other people eat only one meat dish a day, and this is in the evening. At lunch I prefer something made with eggs or a salad, and Otto does his stuff.

Our typical customer, Mrs. Roy Fleming, of Hot Springs, Ark., went shopping for her spring outfit while she was here. The dress she chose is a steel gray rayon crepe, with a fitted bodice and a 24-gored skirt. With it went a cardigan jacket of a paler gray crepe, and her hat is a gray felt toque.

Stars Never Skip Breakfast on a Working Day

Screen stars never skip breakfast on a working day. Long hours before the camera require an early meal with good energy value.

Toast is a big favorite generally, for it's high in energy and low in calories. Here are the breakfast preferences of a few of the headliners:

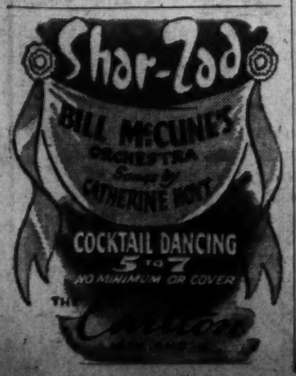
MYRNA LOY—Starts with a big glass of fruit juice; follows this three-quarters of an hour later with well-bettered toast and a cup of coffee.

NORMA SHEARER—First a glass of fruit juice, then either two soft-boiled egge with toast ad sometimes jam, or cereal with crea mand sugar, toast and a cup of coffee. Eats everything she wishes, but in small portions.

SPENCE TRACY—Toast, coffee and two eggs "fried hard."

MARGARET SULLAVAN—Coffee, tosat and fruit juice; sometimes adds cooked cereal with cream.

MICKEY ROONEY—Among the stars, Mickey is one of the heartiest eaters. Likes fruit, cereal, ham or bacon, eggs, toast and coffee for his breakfast.



Big and Little Sister Act in Polka Dots

These two sisters are dressed in their favorite frocks, not their most costly though, for the tot's dress costs less than $2 and the other less than $3. The dimity is unusually soft and pliable and is speckled all over with red and navy polka dots. Both frocks have bright smocking about the waists and bows on the sashes

Mary Haworth's Mail

Dissolute Girl Grows Into Upright Woman; But The Past Haunts Her; How Can She Be Happy?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to submit the following case to your judgment: A young girl of honorable, unusually religious family background, given advantages almost beyond the family means during her prep school and college years, fell into extremely reckless, immoral habits of living. This continued for about 15 years.

During the first five years of this period, there were two abortions, the second of which left the young woman permanently incapable of having children. This knowledge weighed with increasing heaviness as years passed, and probably contributed toward continued recklessness and immorality for some years.

However, she finally developed a real depth of character and responsibility, a practical sense of religion, great understanding and kindliness for the problems of others; and her former ways were entirely abandoned. She is refined and gracious in manner, still attractive, no trace of the past is reflected in appearance or demeanor, and present acquaintances would never suspect or believe what went before. (She earns a rather modest salary at present, and handles it well.)

But her overwhelming problem is a troublesome conscience; a sense of futility and depression over wrongs which can never be entirely rectified; remorse so deep that it cannot be discussed with closest friends or relatives; and a desire to do much good, thereby atoning for some of the evil. Her new life is haunted with ghosts of the past.

She wonders if she should marry and adopt one or more children. Or has she even the right to marry, under the circumstances? Is there not some constructive philosophy you can give her? Any suggestions will be greatly valued. M. E. W.

Unburden Conscience To Qualified Confessor

DEAR M. E. W.: This woman needs to unburden her conscience to a qualified confessor—either a man of God, who can give her the peace which accompanies positive remission of sins; or a mental hygienist, whose dispassionate analysis of her heterodox youthful performance will give her philosophical release from the benumbing grasp of painful memories.

Since school days and perhaps even since early childhood, she has been laboring under a load of guilt, a sense of spiritual damnation—which, as she intuitively divines, goaded her for years along a wayward path, and may have inspired her wild revolt against her "unusually religious background." Her mid-flight reform and repentance seem to be bound up with an anxiety neurosis—a type of distress that may be more an offshoot of her psychologically warped childhood than of her reckless young womanhood.

I feel it would be profitless for her to attempt to superimpose a borrowed "constructive philosophy" on so shaky an understructure. The debris of guilt and fear and tortured self-condemnation must be cleared away, by the confessional or cathartic method, before a sturdy foundation of psychological health can be laid, which will give spontaneous rise to a serene, optimistic philosophy that is truly her own.

Psychiatry has demonstrated how tyrannically one's conscious thoughts and aspirational behavior are dominated by one's unexplored subconscious feelings and unconfessed actions of an unworthy sort. And this woman's story gives further proof. Even though she recognizes that she developed "real depth of character and responsibility, a practical sense of religion, greater understanding and kindliness" as a result of her profligate experiences; and even though she has sincerely repented and permanently abandoned her formerly willful ways, she continues to feel herself almost too unworthy to live,

This doesn't make sense, as her own cultivated intelligence should, and probably does, tell her. But it suggests that her adult rational faculties are more or less blocked by a counter-torrent of childhood feelings, the illogical nature of which she cannot recognize unless scientifically introduced to them. But to understand them is to bring them under rational control, and this is the function of psycho-analytic re-education in sane social and emotional values. Yet the religiously minded person, whose faith becomes as straightforwardly simple as that of a child, likewise is freed from disintegrating subconscious domination when he surrenders his soul to God, trusting completely in His love and healing forgiveness.

Though a spiritual adviser and a psychiatric consultant might differ in their evaluation of this woman's performance, I am sure either would freely concede her the right to marry and adopt one child or more. They probably would see that her remorseful abstinence from the normal emotional pattern of wifehood and motherhood was contributing to her latterday morbidity. And both would tell her, certainly, that the personality she is today represents the sum total of her past experiences; and if that personality is dependable, generous and civilized, then her experiences cannot be accounted indelibly damning.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Rest, Not Worry, Is Most Essential For Body and Mind

By Logan Clendening, M. D

EVERYBODY has a favorite remedy for his common cold. I am in receipt of a good many of these family secrets. My impression is that they do good more or less in proportion to the amount of faith that is placed in the remedy before it is taken.

In preparing these articles on the cold I visited a medical library and read the articles that have been published on the common cold during the last year. I was surprised to find an article in a journal on psyshoanalysis which had to do with the psychic factors in the cause of the common cold. The author found in his experience, and that of other psychoanalysts, that patients who had been psychonalyzed found that they were largely relieved of their colds after the process.

I do not know that I entirely subscribe to this view, but I think that the mental attitude toward the common cold is very important. If you say, "Oh, my! I have another cold. Isn't it awful?" it is likely to be awful. If you say, "Well, here's a kind of a pleasant feeling of lassitude and sleepiness, a nice opportunity to go to bed for a couple of days and read some of the books that I have been meaning to catch up on," you find that a cold is quite a friend. You don't have to go to the office, or answer phone calls, or go out to dinner or lodge meeting, or lectures on the state of Europe and China. You are generally in a state of heaven. Which, in my opinion, argues for the value of the psychic treatment of the common cold.

To come down to physical methods of treatment, when a cold is in the bronchial tubes, undoubtedly the use of vapor inhalations is very comforting. It is important that a proper technique be carried out. If, as is usually advised, you put some camphor or compound tincture of benzoin or other aromatic on steaming water in an open pan and put your head under a towel over the steaming basin, you usually excoriate the skin, usually around the nose and mouth. A better way is to have a metal pitcher with steaming hot water in it, throw the compound tincture of benzoin on top of this, cover the top of the pitcher with a towel, but stick in a large, stiff rubber tube. You can then put the end of the tube in your mouth and inhale the fumes without having them injure your skin or irritate your nostrils.

The technique of the mustard foot bath is also important. The water in which the mustard is placed should not be too hot. The mustard volatilizes best in cool or lukewarm water. A teaspoonful of domestic mustard, tied in a little muslin bag, may be allowed to soak in a quart of cool water; when ready add a gallon of water at 110 or 120 degrees. Hot lemonade with this, aspirin and a night in bed will help a lot by morning.

Food Frills

You can easily make your own paper frills to put on the ends of chops or legs of fowls. Select small-sized paper doilies, cut small holes in the centers and fit the doilies over the chops. Crush them into place or tie them with cord. Adjust the frills just before the meat goes to the table.

Your Figure, Madame!

Modeling Proved Opening Wedge For Movie Stars

Anyone who knew the formula for making good in Hollywood could set up business as a screen consultant and make as much money as Garbo. Not only are movie aspirants on the increase but they evidently believe in garnering advice where they may—they're even asking me!

So I have asked John Powers. If anybody qualifies as a middleman for the movies, Mr. Powers does. A long list of his models have become famous stars: Norma Shearer, first lady of the films; Madge Evans, Joan Bennett, Helen Vinson, Beverly Roberts, Nancy Kelly, Lucille Ball and Jean Arthur—just to name a few.

With almost all of them modeling, not acting, was the entering wedge. Ruby Stevens, the model, protested at being sent over to Cosmopolitan Studios because she "couldn't act." Well, she learned about that! She changed her name to Barbara Stanwyck because it sounded "so elegant." And then she has changed it to Mrs. Robert Taylor, which is elegant enough for all practical purposes.

Snapshots Are Criterion

And how does a girl get to be a model? You do not have to be taller than average or more beautiful. All you have to have is a few things like a good figure, superb carriage, graceful walk, and poise. And you have to be photogenic. You can be that without being beautiful, or vice versa.

Norma Shearer is one of the former models who made good in Hollywood

Ordinary snapshots, Mr. Powers tells me, are a candid criterion of whether a girl is photogenic. He likes applicants to send along a good assortment taken from various angles, together with statistics as to coloring, age, height, weight, size and measurements.

To be a model, a girl has to be pretty good to start with, and to use this career as a stepping stone, she has to get better. You have no idea how hard the Manhattan models work at perfecting themselves. They learn to sit, stand and walk beautifully as part of their job. Then they take up all types of sports and exercise to keep supple and streamlined. You can't be lazy and get anywhere in that business. The competition is terrific.

Don't Go Unless Tapped

Modeling is, of course, only one way to Hollywood. Many of the topflight stars started in stock companies or in radio broadcasting. Alice Faye made her reputation as a singer before she broke into the films. Mary Martin was cold-shouldered by the movie moguls until she became a Broadway star. The same goes for Ann Miller, the talented dancer.

Unless a talent scout taps you on the shoulder, don't go out! That is, don't go unless you have an unlimited checking account. And in that case, what do you want to work so hard for, anyway?

Being Photogenic Is First Asset, Says John Powers

Summer Fashions In Paris Designed For Peaceful Time

Paris (AP).—Fashions recently shown here were for those who expect to spend a peaceful summer. There were organdie frocks and oil silk beach dresses, sheer organdies and embroidered muslins.

Alix showed evening frocks of white handkerchief silks with Finnish peasant embroideries, pink and green oil silk beach frocks to be worn with shorts and sandals.

Lanvin had garden party frocks of eyelet muslins and rose-embroidered organdies, topped with flower-trimmed cartwheel hats of the same material.

In her collection were big patch-style pockets on jackets, hip pockets of fox squares on coats and front pockets in series, sometimes five on one side of suit jackets, or three—each in a different color—on both sides of wool frocks.

Many day dresses were cut on loose, chemise lines with long, full sleeves and bloused backs.

Mrs. Davies Gives Party for Grosjeans

Mrs. Tydings Assists at Affair In Afternoon; Guests Sip Tea And Cocktails in Dining Room

Two traffic policemen and a stream of cars outside Mrs. Emlen Davies' home yesterday afternoon gave evidence of gayety within. Sure enough, the rooms were jammed with people who had come to meet Mr. and Mrs. Robert Grosjean, for whom Mrs. Davies and her eldest daughter, Mrs. Millard Tydings, entertained.

The trio (minus Mr. Grosjean) received in the drawing room, with its light colored walls and floor-length curtains of dark blue brocade. Mrs. Davies was in black, with a cascade of white lace at the neckline, and Mrs. Tydings had also chosen this shade, her floor-length gown of black taffeta fashioned with a billowing skirt. With this she wore a diamond clip and bracelets of brilliants. Mrs. Grosjean, who is a younger daughter of Mrs. Davies, had chosen a pale blue satin dress, which also reached to the floor, and a corsage of lavender orchids.

As usual, everybody gathered in the dining room to sip tea or cocktails politely and sample the homemade sandwiches of several varieties. A huge plate of coconut cake was also an attraction. The table had an all-white centerpiece of roses, carnations and snapdragons, flanked with silver holders in which burned white tapers.

Calling Cards Stacked High

Calling cards were stacked several inches deep on the table, and several hundred friends of Mrs. Davies and Mrs. Tydings must have called during the afternoon. It was well after the 7 o'clock deadline when the last guest departed.

There were many men present—even Senator Tydings dropped in after a busy day up on the Hill. He and Mrs. Tydings have been staying with Mrs. Davies since closing their Maryland home, Oakington, for the winter.

Senatorial circles were further represented by Mrs. Warren Austin, who wore a mink coat over her frock. The Commissioner of Immigration and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling were present, as was Col. Francis Harrington, WPA administrator, who escorted pretty Mrs. Pearsons Rust.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, in black with a diamond clip and a silver fox jacket, was an early arrival. Rafael Lepkowski, who left the staff of the Polish Embassy in the recent shake-up of personnel, told friends he had taken a job with an insurance company and was also collaborating in newspaper work with Edward Weintal, with whom he shares an apartment. Mr. Weintal was head of a Polish press agency here until what is left of the Polish government disagreed recently.

Mrs. George T. Pettingill, in a fireman's red frock, was accompanied by her pretty niece, Miss Peggy Wagner, for whom she will give a tea dance at the Sail Loft of the Navy Yard a week from Saturday. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wagner, of New York and Southampton, Long Island, Miss Wagner is spending the winter here with Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, who was also present yesterday. Miss Wagner was living in London when war broke out, and her parents made her come home, rather to her regret.

Red seemed to be quite a sartorial favorite yesterday. Mme. Prochnik wore a wool suit of this shade and Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey had a little red bird perched on her black hat. Mrs. John Caswell appeared looking like a breath of spring in a tailored gray suit and a hat she had bought that afternoon as, she explained, she was feeling a bit low—a stunning little skullcap with a white bird perched on the brim. Mr. Caswell is another flu victim.

Mrs. Wallach Merriam wore a red velvet hat with her black dress. She was describing the tribulations of a social secretary, having planned a dinenr for 12 last night only to have all the girls except one drop out owing to the grippe.

Several Diplomats Among the Guests

The Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. L. C. A. St. John Curzon-Howe were among members of the Diplomatic Corps present. Also there was Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian Envoy, who wore a cunning little pale blue hat with her silver fox jacket.

Mr. and Mrs. Hopewell Darneille, jr., Mrs. Emory Scott Land, Miss Mabel Boardman, Miss Angelica Lloyd, Mrs. Edward Kinkenstaedt, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Fred Roy and Angus Malcolm were only a few of the many others present.

Mrs. Demarest Lloyd in a fur jacket and fur trimmed turban, poured coffee for a while, and others who took turns at the tea table included Mrs. Alva B. Adams, Mrs. Happy Chandler, Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. Harold Walker, who said she had fully recovered from the birthday party given by her little granddaughter, Alice Birney Robert, and Mrs. George Theunis, whose husband, former Prime Minister of Belgium, is on a governmental mission here.

Since their return from Belgium, Mr. Grosjean's home, Mr. and Mrs. Grosjean have been living in Washington. They have an apartment at the Westchester.

Many Dinners Add to Gayety At the Sulgrave

Yolande de Mauduit, Miss Moorhead and Mrs. Luke Entertain

Several former Washingtonians now visiting here, and numerous dinner parties for the younger set added gayety to the meeting last night of the Friday Supper Club at the Sulgrave.

Renewing Washington acquaintances at the party were Mrs. Hubert Chanler, the former Miss Gertrude Laughlin, who is here for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, and Mrs. Lawrence White, who before her marriage last November was Miss Ruth Sowers. She and Mr. White are staying with Mrs. William Sowers.

Miss de Mauduit Gives Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. White and Mrs. Chanler were dinner guests of Miss Yolande de Mauduit before the dance. Others present at this dinner were Miss Elise Hill and her fiance, Alexander Phillips, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Philip H. Clarke, Miss Diana Rowland, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Miss Dorothea Sowers and Clem Conger, Frank Holcomb, Paul DuVivier, Dean Rucker, James Marsh, Nathan Bartlett and Tom Waterman.

Another group gathered at the cheery 1925 F Street Club, where Mrs. Worthington Luke entertained at dinner for Mrs. Mayo Smith, the Misses Ruth Tuckerman, Bambie McKenna, "Peter" McHarg, Dudley Harmon and Robert Portner, Chester Hammond, Hewlett Henry, of Easton, Md.; Francis Woods, of New York; William Mitchell, Denys Smith, Dr. Henry Beall Gwynne and Walter Birge.

Miss Moorhead Is Hostess

Guests of Miss Ann Moorhead at dinner before the dance included Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs, Mrs. Scudder Döeg, Miss Betty Beale, Mrs. William T. Mann, Miss Katherine DuBoise, Winston Brown, Lieut. Donald MacDonald, Francis Martin, Mrs. William Sprague and Kenneth Failer.

Another dinner given before the dance was the small one at which Mrs. John Fremont entertained for her niece, Miss Joan Hull, daughter of the actor, Henry Hull.

Among the out-of-town guests at the dance was Mrs. John Bradley Greene, of Dayton, Ohio, who has been visiting in Washington after a stay in Sea Island, Ga. She was at a table with Mr. and Mrs. Walter White and Judd Thompson.

MISS MARSYL STOKES,

daughter of Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff, of London, and Sylvanus Stokes, of Annapolis, whose engagement to Robert Montgomerie-Charrington, of England, was made known yesterday in a cable to her uncle, Snowden Fahnestock, of Washington. Miss Stokes, the most glamorous members of the debutante set a season or so ago, is now studying nursing in Hampshire, England, where her mother took refuge when war broke out. The prospective bride is a member of an important old Washington family

Society Turns From Martial Preoccupation To Plans to Laugh With Elsa Maxwell

MAYBE IT'S BECAUSE everybody is worn out with reading war stories and organizing benefits, but the town is turning to the lighter side of life with a vengeance and will outdo itself to entertain Elsa Maxwell. Some of our more intellectually inclined members of society, surprisingly enough, have already planned parties in honor of Elsa, who will talk on "The Science of Laughter" February 11 at Town Hall.

Miss Maxwell will stay with Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who is organizing a buffet supper for her after the lecture. Mrs. Cary T. Grayson plans a dinner beforehand in honor of Miss Maxwell, and Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett will entertain eight guests at dinner that night, later going on to the Town Hall meeting.

THE FORMER Greek Minister, Demetrious Sicilianos, is not trusting his beloved El Greco to the hazards of ocean travel at this moment. Though he had his favorite painting all crated and ready to be sent to Greece, he has decided to leave it behind until things oecome more settled. However, less valuable sections of his art collection will be shipped to Europe shortly.

After 38 years in the diplomatic service, Mr. Sicilianos is leaving Washington today to lead a strictly private life. "Freedom, it's wonderful," he cabled his government at Athens the other day.

THE NEXT THREE months Mr. Sicilianos will spend in New York having fun and continuing his research on the life of Christopher Columbus. He disagrees violently with Salvador de Madariaga's new book on the discoverer of America, in which the author tries to establish Columbus' origin. Sicilianos claims that Columbus' family originally came from Greece. The former diplomat will write the preface for a new book to be published on the great explorer.

ALL HOSTESSES these days seem to be just up from a sickbed or rapidly on their way to one. Mrs. Scudder Doeg recovered from grip just in time to appear at her cocktail party on Thursday at her home on McGill terrace.

Everybody gathered in the cozy little bar, with the exception of one forlorn looking couple in the dining room. The attractive hostess wore a brown crepe dress and a corsage of orchids.

Seen here and there: Lovely Mrs. Warren Barbour, wife of the New Jersey Senator, wearing a mink coat and a hat trimmed with black and green coq feathers . . . Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, of New York and Newport, who has a house next door to Mrs. Doeg's for the winter . . . Mrs. Henry C. Rowland, in a gray fur coat and hat.

The Tuckerman sisters, Ruth and Laura . . . Bambie McKenna, whose family returns today from a stay in Florida . . . Elsie Ekengren, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, Nathan Bartlett, Sherry McAdams, Tom Clagett, Victor Sutro, and many others.

WE HEAR THAT Mrs. J. Butler Wright and her two attractive daughters have taken an apartment on Connecticut avenue while looking around for a house. Since their return from Cuba they have been staying with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

A certain popular young Washington matron was gazing out of her window yesterday and wondering why nobody had come to dig away the snow yet from her street. At that point her little girl rushed in and said "Mother, on the way back from school I saw 25 CCC boys working on Sheridan Circle." "How wonderful," she replied, "at last they're beginning to do something. Were they clearing the street?" "Oh no," replied daughter, "they were cleaning the statue of Sheridan's horse."

Marsyl Stokes To Be Married

A cable from England yesterday informed Snowden Fahnestock of the engagement of his niece, Miss Marsyl Stokes, to Robert Montgomerie-Charrington, son of Mrs. Victor Montgomerie-Charrington, of London, and the late Mr. Montgomerie-Charrington.

The prospective bride is the daughter of Sylvanus Stokes, of Annapolis, Md., and of Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff, of London and Lithook, Hampshire, England. Miss Stokes' mother, the former Margaret Fahnestock, is the daughter of the late Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, of Washington, and was famous as a belle here during her debutante days and later as a hostess. She and Mr. Stokes built the famous "pink palace" on Massachusetts avenue, a social landmark for many years, which was recently torn down to make way for an apartment building.

Miss Stokes was presented to society in Newport, R. I., several seasons ago and visited Washington for extended stays that year. She is a godchild of Mrs. Eldridge Jordan of this city. Miss Stokes was educated in Europe and "came out" in London at a large ball given by her mother.

The family closed their London home after war broke out and are now living at their country place, where Miss Stokes is studying nursing. No date has been announced for the wedding.

She will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Shaw. The Senator will leave that day for St. Paul, Minn., where he will speak February 10, and then will go to Grand Rapids to address a Lincoln Day dinner February 12.

Signor Rosso was one of the most popular envoys who ever represented his country here. He met his wife while serving as Ambassador in the Capital and they were married in Paris shortly after his appointment to Moscow.

Mrs. Samuel Herrick Heads Goodwill Guild

President and All Other Officers Are Reelected; Industries Director Reports Average of 110 Workers Employed

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

Mrs. Samuel Herrick yesterday was reelected president of the Woman's Guild of Goodwill Industries, of which she has been head since it was established two and a half years ago. All other officers were relected to serve with her at a meeting at the headquarters, 1218 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Other officers are: Mrs. Walter W. Husband, first vice president; Mrs. Louis Caldwell, second vice president; Mrs. Richard Stimson, recording secretary; Mrs. L. H. Macomber, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Elmer S. Frazier, treasurer; Mrs. Harvey Ralph, assistant treasurer; advisers from the board of trustees, Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. Elizabeth Murray and Mrs. Stanley C. Sears.

The work for the coming year will be chiefly cooperation with the welfare and social service department of the Industries. At yesterday's meeting it was voted to give $100 to the Industries to use without restriction. It also was decided to make a monthly contribution to the pantry shelf for the use of Mrs. Moody in her social service work. It provides special foods to workers who are on diets and also aids members of their families in emergencies.

MRS. HERRICK

In the short existence of the guild it has almost completely refurnished the kitchen. It has installed a new refrigerator, a hotel stove, coffee urn and many smaller pieces of equipment.

The guild has also given $500 as a foundation for the Cooperative Relief Association of the Industries, designed to pay members who are employed half their salaries for a stated length of time in case of illness.

Initial plans were discussed for the annual spring card party, proceeds of which also will go to this fund. The December style show netted more than $600 for the welfare work.

W. Harold Snape, director of the Industries, gave figures from his annual report, showing that the organization has employed more than 250 handicap persons last year at a weekly average of 110 workers, to whom $164,000 in wages had been paid. The Industries were 92 per cent self-supporting last year, he said.

He stressed the continued need of materials as nearly twice as many persons could be employed with present plant facilities if more materials of all kinds were received. These include clothing, household furnishings, toys, magazines, books and papers.

The more recent periodicals are sold in the bookshop of the Industries and others disposed of as salvage. Proceeds from the latter last year paid the wages of ten persons.

Clothing and furniture are reconditioned and sold at low prices to people of small incomes. There is great need now for shoes and warm clothing, particularly for children and, in large sizes, for adults.

One of the guild's projects will be to assemble more materials for the plant.

Carliner Talks At Chevy Chase

Lewis Carliner, of the consumers' counsel's staff of the Department of Agriculture, yesterday afternoon addressed the monthly meeting of the Civics Section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase.

Speaking on "What the Government Does and Does Not Do for the Consumer," he said the public had been conscious of the consumers' needs only for the past ten years. Protection of hte consumer did not start with the consumer, but with the producer, he said. When meat packers learned that foreign markets demanded that meat received from this country be inspected for wholesomeness, meat inspection followed and was carried on for home consumption as well.

Grading of fruits, vegetables and other farm products resulted from the farmer's need of protection, he said. Coffee dealers asked protection against imitation products and through these circumstances the consumer also received protection before he had asked for it, said Mr. Carliner.

Public concern was aroused by the discovery that poisonous ingredients were being used in the manufacture of some foods, and led to the food and drug act, with that in 1938 establishing fair trade practices following, he said.

He described the threefold function of the consumers' counsel protceting the health of the consumer, to conduct research and publish information; and to give representation for the consumer when the Government is making a move affecting the consumer.

Mrs. Arthur T. Davenport, chairman of the section, opened the meeting and Mrs. Frank Karcek, chairman of the committee on legislation and resolutions, introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Thomas Perry was hostess for the tea following the program.

Relief Stamp Plan Discussed by U. S., Local Officials With Grocers, Dairymen

Plans are afoot to issue "milk stamps" to District relief clients for the purchase of milk at 5 cents a quart in chain grocery stores, it was learned last night.

It is understood the proposed project will receive serious consideration now that the door has been opened to the sale of relief milk under the United States marketing agreement.

Preliminary plans were discussed yesterday at a conference of chain grocery store heads, local and Federal authorities and dairy representatives.

Station Plan Abandoned

Over-the-counter distribution of relief milk by local grocery stores would supplant original plans to establish distributing stations. It had been estimated that at least ten stations would be necessary.

Under the program discussed yesterday, the District would certify relief milk eligibles and issue "stamps." Relief clients would use the stamps to make purchases. Grocers would turn the stamps over to the dairies and the dairies would then submit them to the Government for reimbursement.

It was decided the grocers, District relief officials and the Department of Agriculture would independently work out plans and then meet again.

Grocers Called Parley

It was the grocers who called yesterday's conference in the office of Isaac Jacobson, president of the Independent Food Distributors' Association and the District Grocery Stores.

In addition to Jacobson, those present were Robert E. Bondy, District Welfare director; Dr. E. W. Gaumnitz, director of the division of marketing and marketing agreements, AAA; L. J. Steck, dairy secretary of the same division; David Horenstein, secretary of the Independent Food Distributors Association; M. L. Langford, vice president of the Sanitary Grocery Co.; John A. Logan, of the National Chain Store Association, and representatives of eight major dairies in Washington.

It had been generally understood that the AAA would not permit the distribution of 5-cent milk except through relief stations as is done in Chicago and other large cities. Dr. Gaumnitz, however, agreed to consideration of the grocery store distribution provided a feasible program could be worked out, it was reported.

Virginia Cream Price Up

After announcement of increased local cream prices under the marketing agreement, Virginia dairies yesterday boosted their retail prices to conform.

Provisions in the agreement which increased payments to producers have been adopted by the Virginia Milk Commission, said Gorman Prince, Washington representative of the Alexandria Dairy.

Virginia distributors, he said, have agreed to follow Washington dairies and increase the cream price 3 cents a pint.

Increase Assailed

Consumers' Counsel D. E. Montgomery yesterday issued a statement assailing the new cream cost. He accused distributors of reaping an unfair profit.

"This is the second time in 15 months distributors have played the game of 'heads I win, tails you lose,'" said Montgomery. "In November, 1938, the price paid to producers for milk used for cream was reduced. At that time, the distributors also made a gain because the reduction of retail prices was less than the reduction in their price to producers. The same holds true this time—distributors increased their cream prices far above the proportion of their increased payments to producers."

Giant Safe Looted of $2,560; Victim Beats Off Colored Footpads

Detectives yesterday were seeking some clew to cracksmen who Thursday night took $2,560.82 from a grocery store safe, while a second grocery was robbed, a taxi driver was held up and an intended victim beat off two colored footpads.

Apparently using the combination, yeggs opened the safe of the Giant Food Store at 4555 Wisconsin avenue northwest. Leonard Gutman, manager, discovered the robbery when he opened the store yesterday morning and found a door had been jimmied.

Frederick C. Shelton, 1240 Eleventh street northwest, a cab driver, was beaten over the head with a hammer and robbed of his taxicab and $6.80 by two white men who hired him at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

William Nolan, 71 K street northwest, drove off two colored bandits who threw him to the pavement while he was walking near his home. He suffered cuts and bruises.

Irving Furash, manager of a Sanitary Grocery Co. store at 130 South Capitol street, reported two armed colored men accosted him at the store at 6 a. m. and made off with $238 in bills and change which was in a paper bag on the cash register.

Pushing Inez Zalamea into a snowbank in the 3700 block of Northampton street northwest, a thief last night seized her pocketbook containing $4 in cash and a wrist watch. She was returning to her home at 3709 Northampton street from the movies when attacked, police said.

Citizens Urge City Control of Liquor

The Chillum Heights Citizens Association last night indorsed a resolution favoring municipal control of liquor licenses in the District.

Incorporation of the Federation of Citizens' Associations was urged. The "brotherhood week" of Jews and Christians was indorsed. "Better and more expeditious" inspections of electric wirings was urged as part of the District reorganization plan.

Warren E. Miller was appointed chairman of the legislative committee.

Ruhland Hits Glenn Dale Fund Slash

Asks Tuberculosis Group to Reconsider Step He Says Would Hamper Clinic Work

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, last night asked the District Tuberculosis Association to reconsider its 1940 budget which, he said, would "seriously hamper" work of the local tuberculosis clinic.

His request for $11,300 for clerical workers and additional salary for the Glenn Dale resident surgeon was cut by the association's board of directors Tuesday to $1,280. No funds were voted for the surgeon.

Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the association, said its executive committee would meet at 10 a. m. today to explain its action in curtailing the health department's request.

Meeting to Stop Talk

Another official of the association said the purpose of today's meeting was to prevent any "shooting off of the mouth" as a result of the budget cut. He said the various sums the association has made available to the department have been for "demonstrating the need" to the District of adequate treatment of tuberculosis.

"We had no intention of permanently paying the salaries of these clerks," he added.

Dr. Ruhland's request was contained in a letter to Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, former superintendent at Glenn Dale, who is president of the tuberculosis association.

"I am asking for this action," he wrote, "because I feel that the board should have the opportunity to review the various requests in detail before a final vote is taken, as has been done in previous years . . . So far as the (health) department is affected, the virtual elimination within 30 days of the portion of the budget which applies to the support of the tuberculosis services of the department, as the tentative vote proposes, would result in serious hampering of its work."

$31,280 in D. C. Budget

In a memorandum to the District Commissioners last June, Dr. Ruhland pointed out that it would be necessary to include salaries for clerical workers in the regular District budget estimates. This item was deleted by the Commissioners from the 1940 budget.

For tuberculosis services, excluding Glenn Dale, he requested $64,165 in 1940. This figure was cut to $29,590 and was further reduced by the Budget Bureau to $27,010. The current budget estimate, now before Congress, contains an item of $31,280 for the same service in lieu of $60,313 requested by Dr. Ruhland.

At its meeting today the association's executive committee is expected to support its present budget and to state the matter has no "personal angles." It had been suggested the association's action was a reflection of the recent attempt to oust Dr. Ruhland under the revised Seal reorganization plan.

At the board of directors meeting Tuesday, 13 of 30 members were present when the budget, with its reduced appropriation for Dr. Ruhland's department, was voted upon.

400 Launch Preparation For Mission

Movement Grows From World Crisis, Says U. S. Chairman

The National Christian Mission is an outgrowth of the world crisis, Dr. Jesse M. Bader declared here last night as Washington churches' year of preparation for the mission was inaugurated.

Four hundred men and women of many creeds came to Calvary Baptist Church for the meeting, heralding the coming of the mission in 22 major cities from this September until February, 1941. Its local phase is set for February 2-9, 1941.

"When the world is at its worst, the church must be at its best," advised Dr. Bader, national chairman of the Mission, and secretary of evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Dr. Bader described the mission as a challenge to every Christian for personal participation in church activity.

He was introduced by Dr. Raphel Harwood Miller, chairman of the local committee and pastor of National City Christian Church, who said, in part:

"In a world at war the National Christian Mission is thrust forth with a high sense of immediacy and urgency. At its heart is a conviction that the Christian Gospel has the only adequate message for the world today."

Dr. Elmer G. Homrighausen, mission committee member and affiliated with Princeton Theological Seminary, pictured the church as "coming into a rediscovery of its real nature today." That real nature, he said, is "community."

Dr. William S. Abernethy, host pastor and president of the Washing Ministerial Union, pointed out dangers facing churches and pastors.

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, gave the opening prayer; Dr. Earl L. Harrison, pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church, the benediction.

Navy Plane Crash Injures Three

The Navy announced last night that the torpedo plane PBD-1, crashed when its wings folded in a take-off at San Diego yesterday, critically injuring the pilot, Lieut. (jg) Lester J. Stone. Copilot John Edwin Mattis, radioman, second class, and a passenger, Willard James Gilstrap, radioman second class, also were injured.

Stone, 27, is a native of Washington state and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1934.

Morris, Smith Named To Keystone Council

Two Washington civic leaders were named yesterday to the advisory council of the Keystone Automobile Club. They were Edgar Morris, president of the Edgar Morris Sales Co., and Fred A. Smith, secretary-treasurer of the Floyd E. Davis Co.

Wesson Sees Entire Army With Garands

New Rifles Make U. S. Soldier Most Effective in World, He Says at Banquet

The entire Regular Army and the National Guard will be equipped with the new semi-automatic Garand rifle within the next two years, Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, Chief of Army Ordnance, predicted last night.

The Garand rifle, said Gen. Wesson, is making the American doughboy the most formidable rifleman in the world.

"If additional funds are provided, sufficient to equip completely our troops with these improved weapons, we will have repaired a grave deficiency," Gen. Wesson declared. "The least, it seems to me, that we owe to the fighting man is to arm him with fighting tools equal in effectiveness to those possessed by any nation."

Addresses Rifle Association

Gen. Wesson spoke to 200 members of the National Rifle Association and guests at their annual banquet at the Mayflower Hotel.

Earlier, the association voted to provide four matches for semiautomatic rifles at the national competition at Camp Perry, Ohio. It agreed, however, that the matches should be kept open to types other than the Garand so efficiency of all types can be compared.

Col. L. W. T. Waller was reelected president for a second term. Maj. Gen. M. A. Reckord, adjutant general in Maryland, executive vice president since 1926, and C. B. Lister, secretary-treasurer, were reelected.

Sees Lighter Ammunition

Gen. Wesson said development of rifle ammunition has kept pace with that of the rifle and disclosed that Army tests showed lighter ammunition than that developed in the World War is practical for combat purposes.

"It is now generally conceded that with whatever rifle he may be armed, the fire of the individual rifleman in combat will not be employed at ranges beyond 600 yards," he said.

He said that the M-1 ammunition, first developed for machine guns and later extended to all weapons, is being replaced by M-2 ammunition, an improved form of lighter ammunition in use before the World War.

Advantages of this M-2 ammunition, said Gen. Wesson, are that it cuts a pound of weight from the soldier's load, gives "an entirely satisfactory combat cartridge" and can be manufactured more readily than the M-1 type.

Among those who attended the dinner were Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce; Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War; Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and Representative Buell Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania. Col. Truman Smith, former military attache at Berlin, gave an off-the-record talk on the German campaign in Poland.

Alfred Hemming, a Detroit, Mich., policeman, and William Boone Woodring, of Alton, Ill., were awarded medallions for pistol and rifle marksmanship.

Skidding Auto Injures Youth In Chevy Chase

George W. Crosby, 26, of 3100 Warder street northwest, suffered a possible fractured spine when he was truck by a skidding automobile last night in the 4700 block of Langdrum lane, Chevy Chase, Md. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Montgomery County police said Crosby was struck while attempting to get in his car. Alfred J. Moss, 28, of 4831 Langdrum lane, was driver of the car that struck Crosby, police said.

Carl Fisher, 63, of 817 Varnum street northwest, suffered a possible fractured skull when felled by an automobile at Seventh and G streets northwest. Driver of the car, police said, was Lloyd W. Vought, 18, of 1100 Eighth street northwest.

Capital News in Brief

Swearing In Today

William P. Meredith will be sworn in as a member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today at 10:30 a. m. in Commissioner Hazen's office.

Margaret Davis, niece of the Commissioner, will be sworn in as executive secretary of the board at the same time. Both Meredith and Miss Davis have been with the board since its inception in 1934. Meredith was executive secretary and Miss Davis was administrative assistant.

The new member of the board succeeds Isaac Gans, who retired yesterday. Gans, who has been in Emergency Hospital since Wednesday, was reported to be in a serious condition by attendants.

Well, He Is Dead

He is a very young man and very enthusiastic newspaper reporter and when the Alexandria police desk clerk told him a Col. Ellsworth had been shot to death at King and Pitt streets he broke all records for the distance.

At King and Pitt he found no crowd, no excitment and, most puzzling of all, no dead Col. Ellsworth. More diligent search uncovered a bronze plaque affixed to a building there.

This plaque informed him that in the Marshall House on that spot Col. E. Elmer Ellsworth, of New York, was killed by James T. Jackson May 24, 1861, first Union officer slain in the Civil War.

Lads and Dads Thrilled

G-men's exploits last night thrilled dads and lads of Hamline Methodist Church at their annual get-together in the social hall.

John P. Gleason, administrative assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, told the brotherhood-sponsored father and son dinner how G-men are trained, and described some of their experiences in the field.

Earlier, G. R. Wilhelm presented the church an amplifier, loudspeaker and microphone on behalf of the brotherhood, of which he is president. They were given in memory of the late Dr. John Lapham, dean of the School of Engineering at George Washington University and brotherhood president at time of his death. The equipment will be used in the social hall.

D. Walter Swan, of United Air Lines, presented a film, entitled "Coast to Coast by Plane." Women of the church prepared and served the meal.

Canned Weather

Maybe the harassed Weather Man will have more time to do something about the weather when a device now operating in New York and Chicago is installed in Washington.

In New York, you take up your telephone, dial WEather 6-1212 and a voice answers "fair and continued cold" or whatever the prognostication may be. In Chicago you do the same, without the "6," and early in March Baltimore will have the service.

It's done with a tape and forecasts are changed at 7 and 11 a. m. and 5 and 11 p. m.

Boy of 12 Stabbed

A 12-year-old boy, Leonard Hilgenberg, 1232 Euclid street northwest, walked into Children's Hospital yesterday with a stab wound in his right shoulder. He told police it had been inflicted by an unidentified colored boy in the 1400 block V street northwest.

Leonard told police there had been a snow battle in his block in which he had taken no part. He was attacked immediately afterward while returning to St. Paul's School, he said. He was kept at the hospital for treatment and his parents notified.

Accident Probed

Police last night were attempting to discover the cause of back injuries sustained by Walter S. Allman, 37 of 1900 Bladensburg road northeast. He was found lying beside the track of the Pennsylvania railroad near Montana and New York avenues northeast by a trackwalker for the railroad, John A. Newman, of 425 Franklin street northeast.

A train had passed over the spot where Allman lay 35 minutes before he was discovered, Newman stated. Allman was in Casualty Hospital.

Inoculation Urged

Compulsory inoculation against diphtheria was urged yesterday by Dr. Charles A. Millwater, child specialist, in a lecture before the WPA Health Institute of 200 mothers at the National Museum auditorium.

Dr. Millwater expressed the view that between 60 and 70 per cent of the Washingtonians have sinusitis, mainly due to the moist climate and sudden changes of temperature.

Dr. Bernard Notes, obstetrician, denied a "calumny" that the United States has the highest maternity mortality of all but two civilized nations. He quoted the American maternal mortality rate as being 44 per 10,000 live births.

Carl Stone Dies Waiting Signal to Start Rail Engine

Carl Randolph Stone, 37, of Gaithersburg, Md., locomotive engineer, yesterday dropped dead while [illegible] apron of a locomotive in the Washington Terminal yard. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said death was due to a heart attack.

STONE

Stone, an employe of the Washington Terminal Co. for 20 years, had just finished lunch and was awaiting a signal to start his locomotive when he was stricken. He fell clear of the tracks.

Services will be held Monday at 11 a. m. at Ernest C. Gartner's funeral parlors, Gaithersburg. Burial will be in Rose Hill Cemetery, Hagerstown. Stone leaves his wife, Mrs. Julia Stone, two daughters, Mildred and Ruth, and his mother, Mrs. Myrtle Stone, all of Gaithersburg.

G. A. R. Chief Honored by Relief Corps

A 92-year-old soldier who fought with Sherman to the sea was guest of honor last night at a banquet of the Department of the Potomac Women's Relief Corps at the Mayflower.

He was John E. Andrew, of Quincy, Ill., national commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. Still bright-eyed and active, Andrew spoke briefly at the banquet, urging Americanism as the only true "ism," and retired early.

The banquet closed the fifty-first conference of the department. New officers were installed last night by Mrs. Elfie F. Carroll, national president of the Relief Corps.

They were Miss Mary G. Pinnock, department president; Mrs. Sophie J. Bergner and Mrs. Genevieve Craig, vice presidents; Mrs. Louise Watson, treasurer; Mrs. Cordelia Pollard, chaplain; Mrs. M. B. McElroy, councilor, and Bertha B. Brown, instituting and installing officer.

Members of the executive committee were Mrs. Anna Horn, Mrs. Bess Pearce, Miss Sarah Lynch, Mrs. Gertrude Strickland, and Mrs. Myrtle L. Burke.

Among guests were Mrs. Emma W. Campbell, past national president of the Woman's Relief Corps; Dr. Ralph R. Barrett, commander in chief of the Sons of Union Veterans, and Mrs. Eva R. Blackman, national president of the auxiliary for the Sons of Union Veterans.

Mrs. Cordelia C. Pollard was given a birthday cake. John Colfax Long, department commander of the Sons of Union Veterans, spoke.

Patty Berg Takes Miami Golf Title on 38th Hole

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1940 X*

5th Straight Crown Won With Par 3

Betty Jameson, U. S. Women's Champ, Beaten After 9-Hour See-Saw Scramble

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 2.—Patty Berg won her fifth straight Miami Biltmore Women's Golf title here today, defeating Betty Jameson, the National Champion, on the 38th hole of one of the finest, most thrilling matches ever played between women.

It was nearly pitch dark and the two girls were verging upon exhaustion when Betty, the San Antonio star, missed her tee shot on the short thirty-eighth and lost to the scrapping redhead from Minneapolis. They had been deadlocked at the end of 18 holes and at the end of 36.

Seldom have two women shot such consistently brilliant golf. Each carded a 76 in the morning and another 76 in the afternoon, only five strokes over men's par for a long, exacting course, and six strokes under the women's standard. A crowd of some 2,000 followed the struggle.

8 Times Out Front

When Patty scored her winning 3 on the second extra hole, it marked the eighth time in the course of the match that she had gone ahead. The other seven times Betty had doggedly pulled her back to all-square, but she was never ahead during the long, hot match.

Miss Jameson, who was doubly anxious to win today and prove her right to the National Title, had her chance on the thirty-sixth green. On the 480-yard hole she played a beautiful third shot to within 6 feet of the cup, and had the putt for a birdie and a win. While the gallery held its breath her ball slid past the rim of the cup and her chance had fled.

With the sun disappearing behind the palms, they played the 500-yard first extra hole in the regulation 5s, and the two tired 21-year-olds went on to the thirty-eighth. It obviously was the last hole they would be able to play.

Disaster Struck

Betty, for the first time in nearly nine hours of play, missed her tee shot completely. It wound up on the edge of a deep trap at the left side of the green, and she played it out too strong, across the grass. She came back dead for her 4, but it wasn't good enough. Patty rolled her second close from 20 feet, and Betty held out her hand.

Only some marvelous putting enabled Miss Jameson to carry the match so far. She was shorter off the tee than her chubby rival and nearly always a trifle shorter when they reached the greens. But she chipped well and she holed her putts. On the first nine holes of the afternoon round, for instance, she had seven 1-putt greens.

Always Patty, playing fast and brilliantly, was going ahead. Once, early in the second round, she went to 2 up. But always the steady, ultra-deliberate San Antonio girl sank her putts and pulled Patty back.

Following are their cards:

Trainer in Jail After $300 'Fix' Offer at Hialeah

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 2 (AP).—The arrest of a trainer on a charge of attempting to "fix" a race at Hialeah Park, and the suspension of a jockey pending investigation of an unsatisfactory ride, were announced today.

County Solicitor Robert R. Taylor said Douglas Stelsing, 25, trainer, who came here from Baltimore, was lodged in the county jail on a charge of "attempting to prearrange the result of a horse race." Conviction carries a mandatory sentence of one year in jail, he stated.

Stelsing, Taylor said, offered Apprentice Jockey Clinton J. (Jack) Harrell $300 to "pull" Grand Marie in yesterday's eighth race. Harrell reported the proposal to stewards and was instructed to ride as scheduled. The horse finished fourth, but stewards said Harrell's ride was entirely satisfactory.

Jockey Paul Ryan, however, was ordered suspended immediately today, "pending further investigation of his unsatisfactory ride on the horse Sun Appollo in the eighth race Thursday." This horse, the favorite, finished third.

10-Minute Free-for-All Mars Game

2 Players Injured, Policemen Help Stop Battle Royal; Colborne Rally Wins

By Jack Munhall.

The Port Colborne Sailors rallied with three final-period goals to nose out the Washington Eagles, 3-2, at Riverside Stadium last night in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League match, marred by injuries to two players and a free-for-all fight.

Action was halted for ten minutes in the third period while officials and two policemen quelled a battle-royal in which all players of both teams either swung fists or acted as peacemakers. Principals in the melee were Paul Courteau, of Washington, and Vince (One-sock) Upper, of Port Colborne.

Upper was gashed above his right eye by a stick which he said, was wielded by Washington's Ross Knipfel in a scrimmage before the actual fighting began. In the first period Mike Germann, of the Eagles, had retired from the ice to have a forehead cut patched up. After the game four stitches were taken in Germann's wound and one in Upper's.

Coaches Redvers Mackenzie, of Washington, and Bill Holmes, of Port Colborne, after yelling at each other's players throughout the torrid match united in a common cause after the game to berate the officials.

Mackenzie bitterly protested the ousting of his star defense, Bill Davies, for holding, while Holmes charged that Referee Frank Megaffin's laxity in calling penalties had precipitated the free-for-all.

Davies drew a 2-minute banishment in the waning minutes of play and when the Sailors pushed in the decisive goal at 19:54 on an unassisted shot by Lloyd Fitzgerald, the Eagles had only four players on the ice. Courteau had left the rink on a match penalty for his part in the fighting. The Sailors were one player shy, Upper having received a 5-minute fighting penalty.

This was Port Colborne's first victory in three games with Eastern Amateur League teams on its trip around the circuit. Previously the Sailors had bowed to River Vale, 4-2, and to Baltimore, 3-2, in overtime.

Tonight they meet Atlantic City and tomorrow afternoon they finish their swing with a match against the New York Rovers.

Last night's loss prevented Washington from tying Baltimore for second place and dropped them two more points behind the pacesetting Rovers, who defeated Atlantic City, 7-6.

The first period crackled with fast and brilliant hockey. The Eagles took a 1-0 lead at 13:49 when Foster scored on a rush down the left-wing lane on a double pass from Partis and Burrage.

The Washington goal came as somewhat of a surprise, for until that time Port Colborne had been making the threats, putting Goalie Lee to the test with a barrage of shots. The Sailors' team work was excellent and it was only by dint of several great saves that Lee turned them back scoreless.

The Sailors changed goalies midway of the period, marking the first time a team has used a pair of net tenders here. Ramsay, of the Eagles, drew a pair of two-minute penalties, once for defending himself against Center Doug Runions, of the visitors.

Airtight defensive work by both teams featured the second period as Washington boosted its advan-

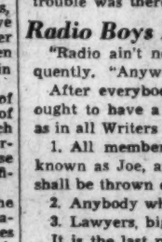
Just as Caesar had his Brutus and Charles I his Cromwell, virtually every sport that ever attracted so much as a handful of spectators has its "Writers Association."

You have the Football Writers Associations, Baseball Writers Associations, Hockey Writers Associations, some places have Tennis Writers Associations—in Philadelphia they threw caution to the wind and formed the Sporting Writers Association.



HAILEY

That is all quite admirable—but what we want to know is what about cricket? We suspect a lot of fellows want to know about cricket. Since back in the gay '90s cricket has been flourishing in Washington and it has remained uncharted territory by the organizers and joiners. So without hesitation and any further shilly-shallying we announce organization of the Writers Association to end all Writers Associations—the Washington Cricket Club Writers Association.

President Qualifies Perfectly

The first meeting was held in Joe's Hash House, and a lot of people named Joe attended. We won't mention the time because time means nothing to us cricket writers.

A little fat Joe was elected president by a landslide vote when it was learned that he had never seen a game of cricket, never heard of the stuff and thought cricket was just something that made noise at night. The little fat Joe even admitted he didn't give a hoot for cricket, because he was a lawyer. Four other Joe's who admitted they didn't give a hoot for cricket because they were lawyers, too, were elected to the other offices without a murmur.

This procedure is the first step in forming any legitimate Writers Association. Occasionally a slip-up occurs and a writer is named, but he usually is somebody who practices law on the side.

We were almost barred from the meeting because we once saw a cricket game between the Washington Cricket Club and a team from Her Majesty's ship Exeter, which is out on the ocean somewhere looking for enemy boats just now. We confessed, however, that we didn't know what was going on at the time and that when we dropped in the game was going into its second day anyway.

The little fat Joe made a motion that we be admitted as a provisional member, and the motion was carried. There were a couple of other Joe's in the back of the room who admitted they had seen a game of cricket once, but not on purpose, so everybody was satisfied we had the perfect setup for a Writers Association—a lot of lawyers, men about town, a couple of guys who owned a laundry and a bakery, and three or four fellows who had seen a cricket game. It began to resemble the other Washington "Something" Writers Association for a time. Only trouble was there were no radio men present.

Radio Boys Eat Too Much

"Radio ain't no place for cricket," the little fat Joe explained eloquently. "Anyway, them radio fellers eat too much."

After everybody had hamburgers and lemonade, somebody said we ought to have a set of rules and regulations. Entrance requirements, as in all Writers Associations, were quite simple:

1. All members must be named Joe, or exhibit willingness to be known as Joe, and anybody who quips, "Hello, Joe, whaddaya know," shall be thrown out.
2. Anybody who has seen cricket played on purpose is barred.
3. Lawyers, big businessmen, and ex-cricket players are welcomed.

It is the last part of Rule 3 that is the most important thing to any Writers Association. Anybody who so much as kicked a football, boxed an ear, stolen a base or fallen on the ice is an authority and is welcome to all Writers Association functions as speaker.

The Washington Cricket Writers Association will suffer an inferiority complex because of this lack of ex-players. Football, baseball, boxing and hockey turn them out in platoons at Writers Association functions, but there wasn't an old cricketer in the whole of Joe's Hash House. But the search is on. If you have any old cricketers about the house, a word to them would be appreciated.

Georgetown Loses, 39-34, To Colgate

3,000 See Hoyas Lead at the Half; Pajak Tops Losers

By the Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., Feb 2.—Led by Hank Fawcett, high scoring junior guard, who accounted for 19 points, Colgate's strong basketball team tonight defeated Georgetown U., 39-34, before 3,000 fans.

The victors, trailing at the half, 19-17, worked their way to a 27-27 deadlock in the final 10 minutes and then on long-range shots by Fawcett and Capt. Don Collins, forged ahead to a 34-29 lead and were never headed thereafter.

George Pajak, Georgetown's flashy guard, was high scorer for the Hoyas. Pajak sank 7 field goals and two free throws for a total of 16 points. Pajak and Buddy O'Grady, forward, each scored field goals in the closing minutes of the first half to put the Hoyas ahead at the intermission after they tarried 15-17. Fawcett contributed 8 field goals and three free throws to Colgate's total.

Opening the second half, Colgate, with Fawcett and Collins leading the way, tied the score on three successive occasions. In the face of the Colgate attack, Georgetown's defense weakened, and the Raiders pulled ahead by virtue of three goals by Fawcett and Collins.

Vic Hazard, Colgate's forward, eligible for the first time this season, turned in a smart performance, sinking two field goals and two free throws for a total of six points.

Walker Wins Kayo

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 2 (AP).—Jack "Buddy" Walker, 193½, Columbus Negro, knocked out Bos Nestell, 190, of Los Angeles, Calif., with a right to the chin in the third round of their scheduled 10-round bout here tonight. Walker claims the Ohio heavyweight title.

Bettina Wins TKO Upset Over Apostoli

Referee Donovan Halts Bout in Twelfth; Winner Earns Another Light-Heavy Title Shot At Conn; Apostoli's Manager Claims He 'Quit'

By the United Press

New York, N. Y., Feb. 2.—Former Champion Melio Bettina tonight won another shot at the light-heavyweight title by turning the tables violently upon Fred Apostoli and scoring a twelfth round technical knockout over the San Francisco Italian before 12,369 wildly cheering fans in Madison Square Garden.

Referee Arthur Donovan halted the lop-sided contest at the end of the twelfth round and refused to permit the helpless and battered former middleweight champion to come out of his corner for more punishment.

By this victory, southpaw Bettina more than reversed the 12-round decision that Apostoli had won over him in their first meeting at the Garden on January 5. Tonight's bout, slated for 15 rounds, was a walkaway for the pride of Beacon, N. Y.

May Have Concussion

He gave Apostoli such a beating that Apostoli's manager, Larry White, announced after the bout that Apostoli "had quit the ring, and I'll retire him now. I won't let him fight any more."

Dr. John T. Truiga, of Beacon, N. Y., Bettina's personal physician, examined Apostoli in the dressing room and said that Fred "had an intracranial injury—either a concussion of the brain or a fracture of the skull." He found the pupil of Freddy's left eye larger than the right and that he needed medical attention immediately.

His right eye was swollen almost shut. Although Apostoli had once suffered a technical kayo because of a cut eye at the fists of Freddie Steele and another technical kayo from Ceferino Garcia last October, he received the worst beating of his career tonight.

Apostoli was taken from his dressing room to Polyclinic Hospital, just across the street, for observation. He expected to remain there until tomorrow afternoon, at least. Apostoli claimed that a bad chest cold had hampered his efforts tonight.

Apostoli tried to make a fight of it in the early rounds, but Melio's left hooks and one-two punches were far too fast for his reactions.

Athletic Body Levies Fines on Wrestler, Boxer

By the Associated Press

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 2.—You've got to fight, if you want to enter the ring professionally in Pennsylvania; but at the same time, you can't go around socking the customers.

The Pennsylvania Athletic Commission made that clear when it slapped penalties on a boxer and a wrestler yesterday.

At the one extreme, it found, was Joe Wagner, of Cleveland. Commissioner George J. Jones, jr., said Wagner "waltzed" through a boxing match with Gus Dorazio, of Philadelphia, at Wilkes-Barre, January 30. The pugilist drew a six-months suspension.

On the other hand, Sammy Cohen was barred from wrestling in the Keystone State for 30 days because, Jones said, the grappler took a poke at a fan after he climbed out of the ring at Harrisburg.

Detroit Lions' Buy Ratified By Pro League

President Storck Welcomes Mandel and Associate Purchasers

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 2.—The executive committee of the National Professional Football League today ratified the purchase of the Detroit Lions franchise by Fred L. Mandel, jr., of Chicago, and his associates, Tony Owens, of Chicago, and Charles Chaplin, of New York.

Mandel bought the club for the reported sum of $225,000 from George A. Richards last month.

"We are pleased to have Mr. Mandel and his associates in the league," said President Carl L. Stork in announcing the committee's action today. "We have full confidence in the integrity and ability of the new owners to operate the Lions in a manner that will be a credit to Detroit and to professional football."

Mandel said today he planned to spend at least three days a week in Detroit developing his organization for the 1940 season and that he planned to make his home there after August 1. He had already named George Clark as the Lions' coach and announced that William A. Alfs, vice president under Richards, would be president of the club.

Hold Out Not Holding

Wanamaker Mile Features Millrose Games

Cunningham Defends Laurels Tonight; Kehoe Entered

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 2.—The thirty-third annual games of the Millrose A. A., presenting all-star casts in races from 60 yards on up to 2 miles, will set the major portion of New York's indoor track season rolling tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden.

Main event, as it has been for the past decade, will be the Wanamaker Mile. Fifteenth in the series, it will find Glenn Cunningham trying for the seventh in a string of victories that started in 1933 and has been broken only once.

The Kansasan won last year in 4:13, with Chuck Fenske trailing by 2 yards. Already beaten this year by Fenske and Gene Venzke, Glenn will be no better than even money against these two and Blaine Rideout, Lou Zamperini, running indoors in New York for the first time, and Les MacMitchell, New York U. Sophomore making his big-time miling bow.

Record May Fall

Records are pretty much as an afterthought in the Millrose meet, since it comes too early in the season for the boys to be at their fastest. But one mark that seems due to be wiped off the books is the 49.6 record for the quarter-mile set 27 years ago by Long Tom Halpin.

The event was added to this year's program expressly to get that outdated record off the books, a task which will be entrusted primarily to Johnny Quigley, Manhattan freshman; Harley Howells, Frank Ohl, Harold Cagle and Charlie Belcher.

Older than the Wanamaker Mile and only a shade less attractive is the Millrose 600. Jim Herbert and Wes Wallace, winners the last two years, will match strides with Charlie Beetham, Sanford Goldberg and one of the two Canadians in the meet, Bill Fritz, of Kingston, Ontario.

Georgetown and Maryland have entered relay teams, the Hoyas a 1-mile quartet composed of Vincent Braun, George Tucknott, Ken Lyden and Mort Alnwick, and the Terps a 2-mile foursome of Mason Chronister, Allan Miller, Tommy Fields and Bob Condon. This will be the first appearance of a Maryland 2-mile team in the Millrose games.

Georgetown will be making its second start, having won its section of the 1-mile relay in the rover Cleveland games.

Paavo Nurmi May Broadcast From Ship on Arrival

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Paavo Nurmi, due here aboard the liner Bergensfjord tomorrow morning, is as laconic and noncommittal as ever.

The National Broadcasting Co. radioed the "Phantom Finn" it would like to arrange a broadcast from the ship as it comes up the bay. Peerless Paavo's reply was:

"I will be glad to broadcast possibly."

Nurmi is coming here as manager-coach with Taisto Maki, Finnish runner who is the world's best at distances of 3,000 to 10,000 meters.

Outfielder Charlie Keller Returns Contract Unsigned

Expects to Come To Terms Without Difficulty, Though

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Feb. 2.—Charlie Keller, outfield star of the New York Yankees, and hero of the last World Series, has returned his contract unsigned. The athlete, who resides here, doesn't expect any difficulty in adjusting his salary differences with Ed Barrow, general manager of the Yankees, but he is demanding more than the $3,000 hike in salary offered by the new pact.

While Keller declined to state the amount of salary he wants from the Yankees this season, it is understood from reliable sources that he is demanding $10,000.

Keller, who has been keeping in condition here this winter by hunting and hiking, expects to leave for the New York training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., about February 20. He will be accompanied by his wife, young son and his mother, Mrs. Charles Ernest Keller, of Middletown.

Those receiving the gold rings were Earl Fullilove, Jim Reichey, John Lascari, Mark Ostinato, Jim Castiglia, Ed Kowalski, Augie Lio, Bill Nealon, Jules Koshlap, Joe Mickey, Joe McFadden, Lou Ghecas, Joe Daniels, Bob Kercher and Al Matuza.

Shaven Head of Player Adds Woe To Cage Game

Seattle, Feb. 2 (AP).—Consider the woe of Robert (Windy) Reynolds, star of the St. Martin's College basketball team, who lost a bet and in payment had to shave his head.

Resounding slaps punctuated the melee under the basket in a recent game as players for both sides scrambled for possession.

Cards Seek 4th Straight Ring Victory

Battles Expected to Lure Record Crowd; Revised Team Faces Explorer Ringmen

By Jack Munhall.

The "C" men of clout, Columbus and Catholic, are expected to draw the largest crowd ever to see indoor boxing in the District tonight when they climb inside the ropes for the first time at Brookland gym.

More than 3,800 fans will be on hand, according to C. U. officials, to watch the long-awaited local "natural" in which the Cardinals have been established decided favorites. C. U. will enter the match undefeated in three starts while the Explorers will be seeking their first victory in two appearances. First fight will be at 8:30 o'clock.

It is by direct comparison of the foes' success against Miami University, a mutual opponent, that Eddie LaFond's Cards are favored over Jim McNamara's downtown sluggers. C. U. tamed the Hurricane, 5½-2½, three days before Miami nosed out Columbus, 4½-3½ in an decided by the final bout.

LaFond Predicts Draw

Coach LaFond, however, was his usual pessimistic self last night when asked to predict the outcome, for he could foresee nothing better than a 4-4 draw.

"We've been lucky so far," LaFond said, "in winning enough of the lighter classes to remain undefeated but tonight I don't believe we can take more than four bouts. I am forced to concede Columbus an edge in every class up to 155 pounds."

McNamara's optimism in forecasting a victory for his boys seems to bear out LaFond's uncertainty. The big Columbus coach is counting on the return to action of heavyweight Abe Cohen, who missed the Miami match, plus the improved physical condition of his team to account for an upset of the Cardinals.

Both Catholic and Columbus will start revised line-ups tonight. The Explorers have two changes over the team they started against Miami. Cohen, the sharp-hitting southpaw 190-pounder, will supplant Artie Lane at heavyweight and Louis Taub, a product of New York City, will step into the 125-pound slot instead of Phil Appell.

Card Line-up Revamped

The Cards will be vastly different from the squad which last week upset Maryland, 4½ to 3½. Joe Bunsa, 155 pounds; Fred Stant, 175 pounds, and Heavyweight Jay Turner are back on the firing line after missing the Maryland match because of ineligibility under the three-year varsity competitive rule.

In addition LaFond is going to gamble with a freshman who will make his maiden collegiate start. He is 135-pound Luis De la Rosa, a Puerto Rican lad, who will replace John Tedder. About De la Rosa LaFond knows little except that he knows how to defend himself and that he is game.

Feature bout of the match should be the 145-pound engagement between Huck Hughes, of C. U., and Buddy Lazear, Columbus' savage hitting welterweight. Lazear, packing dynamite in either paw, is considered one of the finest college boxers in local history and has compiled a fine record for the Explorers. Miami rated him so highly it elected to forfeit his class rather than expose an outclassed foe to Lazear's pounding fists.

Blond, imperturbable Hughes, howeve., should be a worthy opponent for the visiting ace despite his more limited experience. The Card welter was something of a question mark at the start of the season but has developed rapidly, holding Miami's highly touted George Bach to a draw and losing only by a hairline decision to Maryland's Hotsy Alperstein.

The heavyweight duel between Turner and Cohen also should be a top-notch attraction. Cohen, when a freshman at Maryland last year, was rated an "outstanding" prospect by Coach Heinie Miller and appears to carry as much sleep-dealing potient in his mitts as the undefeated Turner.

Turner is one of four Cardinals unbeaten to date. Bunsa, Strang and Stant are the others. Between the four of them they have compiled six knockouts. Strang and Stant have two apiece.

Lineups (Columbus First):

Bethesda Five Wins, 28-26, In Overtime

With half the 3-minute period gone, Barnsley stepped to the foul line for a pair of free tosses. A hush hit the packed Bethesda auditorium as the little star methodically dropped the ball cleanly through the cords twice. Then a roar went up and fans poured on the court to hoist their hero to their shoulders.

It was the second meeting of the teams this year, Western's Raiders starting their season with a stinging 32-17 triumph over the Blue and White. It was also Bethesda's first victory over the Raiders in the last six years of their competition.

Fight Was High Spot

Almost stealing the spotlight from Barnsley's "clutch" shooting was the rousing fist-swinging that marked the late stages of the third quarter. Franny Hughes, Bethesda guard, who was involved in hostilities during a game with Eastern earlier in the season, was again in the thick of things.

With Bethesda out front, 17-16, Hughes stuck out a foot and tripped Hal Mitchell as the latter dribbled for the basket. Mitchell evidently decided the act was rougher than the play warranted and came off the floor with fists flailing. Both players landed straight rights before their mates separated them, and they both were waved out. The foul was Hughes' fourth, however, and he lost nothing by the referee's decision.

Also Tight Battle

Besides the above features, the game offered fans one of the closest and most exciting battles of the season. One point separated the teams after each of the first two periods, Bethesda holding 5-4 and 9-8 leads, and after three periods the count was upped to 20-18 for the Bethesdans.

Credit for tying the count and causing the overtime went to Jimmy Karas, Western guard, who ripped the net from the side with less than 30 seconds left. Karas, Irvin Schenker and Johnny Lumpkin paced the Raiders' attack with a total of 19 points between them, but honors for the day went to lean Johnny Shumate, the winners' forward, who turned in three field goals and as many foul shots for a 9-point total.

Seattle, Feb. 2 (AP).—Broken bones in Al Hostak's left hand were set in a cast today, and Dr. H. T. Buckner said the N. B. A.-recognized middleweight champion would not be able to fight "for at least eight weeks."

Hostak arrived this morning from Chicago, where he lost an upset ten-round decision to Tony Zale in a nontitle mix. Host was leading until he broke bones in his fourth and fifth fingers on Zale's forehead in the sixth round.

Elks-Hagerstown Pin Match Tonight

The "home" half of the Elks Bowling League's inter-city bowling match with Hagerstown will be rolled tonight at Recreation Alleys starting at 8 p. m.

Local Elks go into the event with a definite handicap, their earlier meeting with Hagerstown having resulted in a 94-pin advantage for the out-of-towners. Two teams from each city will match maples, Washington's representatives having been drawn from the 14-team Elks League and Hagerstown's coming from an 18-team circuit in that city.

Favorites Win In First Round Of Badminton

Kay Baker Scores Shutout; Close Games In Men's Division

Favorites, for the most part, went along their merry way last night as the third annual District of Columbia invitation badminton tournament began at the Kensington Armory. Exponents of the racquet and bird sport from a score of Eastern cities are competing.

Kay Baker, District champion, scored a shutout victory in her first-round match with Fairfax Brooke, defeating the Baltimore girl by twin 11-0 counts. Mary Whittemore, National No. 1 player, had little trouble downing Valentine Edgar, of New York, by scores of 11-2 and 11-0. The closest match of the women's singles went to Mrs. Glenn Marks, of New York, who defeated Virginia White, of Baltimore, by 12-10, 11-4.

Two three-set battles marked the early rounds of the men's competition. Wally Brandt, of Cleveland, won from Dr. Paul Lewis, of Pittsburgh, only after a sizzling 17-14, 13-5, 15-7 battle, while Julian Burgess, of New York, staged a brilliant comeback to down Wes Snyder, of Pittsburgh, by 7-15, 15-11, 15-10.

The tournament will continue today and tomorrow. The men's and women's quarter-finals will be played this afternoon between 2 and 4 o'clock. The survivors will meet in the semifinals tonight between 8 and 10 o'clock. The finals will be played tomorrow.

El Brookman Meets Finazzo In Fight Prelim

Local Welterweight Signs for 8-Rounder At Turner's Arena

A party of the second part was finally found for Eddie Finazzo, of Baltimore, yesterday when El Brookman, local welterweight, put his name to a contract for an eight-round scrap on the first card at Turner's Arena Tuesday night.

The Brookman-Finazzo duel will be the third eight-rounder on a program to be headlined by the comeback effort of Natie Brown against California's Mickey Avoy. Phil Furr and Irish Danny Devlin are also scheduled to do eight rounds.

Brookman will appear on the card to replace Joey Spangler, of Richmond, who was forced to withdraw due to an injured hand. The mitt was hurt in an engagement with Bob Wilson recently.

According to Arena headquarters, Tuesday's fight will be Brookman's chance to redeem himself for a loss to Furr a couple months ago. If he successfully hurdles Finazzo, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn said there was a chance he would be rematched with Furr in the near future.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 2—Hank Greenberg wants a season's indulgence while he learns to play the outfield.

"I'm a self-made ball player," the big, good-looking slugger was telling us tonight. "I lack those gifts the natural players have. The things I learn to do come the hard way, but once I learn them I never forget them. And I feel that a fellow like myself often becomes a lot better in the thing he learns to do, by trial and error, than the guy who starts off great."

CONSIDINE

He doesn't anticipate any trouble on grounders. "It's those long flies that are going to be tough for me, I think," he admitted in his frank, open way. "You don't notice it much from the grandstand, but good outfielders have a . . . well you might call it supernatural sense. The fellow sitting in the stand watches the batter and the flight of the ball, and takes it for granted when the outfielder catches it after a long run.

Outfielder Seems to Know Immediately

"But what he doesn't see is the way an outfielder starts with the sound, rather than the sight, of the ball. And how they seem to sense how deep the ball is going to be, how fast they'll have to run to get it and a half a dozen other things—all before the ball has gotten a few feet off the player's bat. They play by ear, you might say, and that's going to be a little tough for me to learn."

We asked him how he thought the Detroit fans, some of whom have forgotten that the fellow has the amazing record of having driven in a run a game ever since he has been with the club, would treat him sympathetically during the year of apprenticeship he seeks.

"Oh, there'll probably be a few fans on me," he shrugged, "but that doesn't matter. Most of them will know I'm out there plugging and trying to make the grade.

"While I'm on that, I might as well tell you that one of your pals got me in a tough spot in Detroit with a story that I liked the Detroit team and didn't like the Detroit fans. Now, what the blazes . . . why would I say a thing like that? I'm playing in the greatest baseball city in the country, for a fellow who'll pay me more than any other owner would, and in a park that was built for me. Would I be nuts enough to squawk with a set-up like that? How many home runs would I hit in a place like Washington?"

'Kidding Himself' Not in Hank's Line

"I've still got a lot of things to learn about baseball," he told us, sincerely. "That's why I get out there and practice, and try new things and experiment. I still take too many strikes. And sometimes, I get too worked up over the game. I begin playing the other positions, mentally. I'll think Pete Fox isn't playing a batter in the right position and I'll wave at him to move over—and he'll get sore. As he has a right to, I guess.

"I saw what was wrong with the batting stance of one of our rookies last year and offered to take him out one morning with me and try to work at it. He said, 'no.' He said, 'you're hitting .315 Greenberg and I'm hitting .220, but you make thirty grand and I make five. I'm hitting all right. You should be hitting six times as much as me."

No More Worrying About Other Players

Hank chuckled. "I guess that's one of the reasons I'm going to stop worrying about the others and look out for myself this year. I've got a tough job ahead of me. Give me a year and I'll lick it. I'll never be a DiMaggio. That's too much to expect, for he's the greatest ball player I ever saw or probably ever will. But I'll plug in there."

Greenberg does not believe the current story that the Tigers have moved him to the outfield to soften the blow of an eventual trade.

"Mr. Briggs is satisfied with me," he said. "He's a great man. A man you can talk to. A couple of years ago when I held out we had an argument and when I finally signed he said, 'Hank, that's a lot of money for a young man to get. When I was 27 I was making $18 a week and had a family to support.' So I said, 'well, Mr. Briggs, it'll all work out. When I'm your age I'll probably be making $18 a week.'"

International Loop In Meeting Today

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—The International League will hold its annual schedule meeting here tomorrow with executives of the clubs likely to adopt the schedule perfunctorily and devote most of their attention to farm system reforms proposed by Commissioner K. M. Landis.

The league already has designated April 18 as the opening date and September 15 for closing, making the season a week longer this year than last. As usual the Northern teams will open in the Southern section of the league, with Buffalo at Baltimore, Montreal at Jersey City, Toronto at Newark and Rochester at Syracuse.

An innovation will be scheduled double-headers every Sunday during the season.

Maryland U. Stages Twin Sports Card

Ring Rivals Battled To Tie Last Year; Heavies in Feature; Hopkins Court Foe

Maryland University boxers will be underdogs in their own ring tonight when they entertain the Powerful University of Virginia team in Ritchie Coliseum as the climax to a day devoted to boxing and basketball.

The afternoon will be taken up by the freshmen, the little Terrapins meeting Baltimore Poly's basketball team at 2:30 p. m. and fighting the Virginia freshmen at 4 p. m.

Varsity boxing will follow the Terps' basketball game with Johns Hopkins at 8 p. m.

Match a Draw Last Year

The Virginians, whose 6½-1½ rout of a highly rated University of Carolina squad last week surprised even their veteran coach, 73-year-old Johnny LaRowe, hold a 2-to-1 edge in victories over Maryland in the six matches between the two schools. Last year's match was a 4-to-4 draw.

Coach Heinie Miller's problem has been heightened by the fact that Newton Cox, 165-pound Southern Conference champion, and Bob Bradley, 127-pounder, will have to take it easy in the ring because of injured hands they received in training.

With these two in condition Miller could count on at least two points, but he is assailed by doubts today.

"We'll just have to get along the best we can, but I think we'll have a few surprises for them," he said yesterday.

Cox Faces Somerville

Of the two "lame" fighters, Cox probably will have the toughest assignment. He meets one of Virginia's three letter men, Fenton Somerville. Bradley meets a newcomer to the Cavalier varsity, Arthur LipKint.

Both teams have only three veterans. Maryland has Bradley, Cox and Nate Askin, lightweight. Virginia has Somerville, Truman Southall, 155-pounder, and Dick Williams, 145 pounds.

The light-heavyweight battle between Kenneth Rathbun and Maryland's Josh Hughes will hold chief interest. The two, classmates and close friends at Baltimore Poly, fought as freshmen last year to a draw and there is a keen friendly rivalry between the two.

It was Rathbun who rushed over to the North Carolina corner last week and apologized so profusely for knocking out his Tarheel opponent. He is a southpaw fighter, but Hughes has had plenty of time to learn about southpaws from his coach, one of the leading exponents of the southpaw fighting style.

Izzy Leites will take over the heavyweight role for the night and along with Cox, Bradley, Izzy Alperstein and possibly Norman Hathaway in the 155-pound class will carry the Terps' hopes for a close upset.

Maryland defeated Duke, 5-3, in its opener, then lost to C. U., 4½-3½. Virginia downed a strong Virginia Tech team, 7-1, and last week stopped Carolina.

Meade Rides Rodin to Victory in Hialeah Feature Race

$19.10 Horse Winner by Half Length

Memory Book Second In Role of Choice; Little Bolo Scores By Nose in Thriller

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 2.—Rodin, a former J. E. Widener horse now owned by C. C. Walsey, scored a hard-earned victory in the mile and a furlong Winter Haven claiming handicap, feature offering on the program here today. Don Meade, who has failed to keep up his 1939 pace since returning to the saddle this winter, put up one of his best finishes to get the $19.10 for two hazard first home by a half length. The time was 1:49 4-5

P. L. Kelley's plodding veteran Memory Book, challenged too late to do better than second. The Greentree Stable castoff was a 9-to-10 choice in the field of seven. Mrs. M. Goldblatt's Dnieper, once owned by Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, was another two lengths away in third place.

Well beaten in a recent sprint, Rodin was an improved horse today. Meade could not keep up the $4,500 plater going to the first turn, but tried to squeeze through on the backstretch and was blocked. Rodin finally found an opening and gained steadily. He put away the fast starting Gay American after turning for home and held on tenaciously when the slow starting Memory Book staged his belated rush. Dnieper was well up all the way.

Little Bolo Scores

Apprentices Merrill Packer and Mike Caffarella hooked up in a pretty driving duel to the wire in the fourth dash, with the former's mount, Little Bolo, lasting to click by a nose at $10.50 for $2. Dandy Gal was second, with Raise Up third, four lengths behind. Little Bolo raced Cuckoo-Man into early submission and gained a daylight lead. He needed every bit of it when Dandy Gal staged a dying bid.

Chance Cut made a show of eight other juvenile platers in the 3-furlong curtain raiser. The bay miss shot right to the front, opened up a wide lead and won by a half-dozen lengths in 0.44 4-5, to pay the talent $3.60 for $2.

Flinchum Rides Winner

Jack Flinchum drove Liberty Queen, the $5.30 for $2 favorite, to a head victory in the fifth race, a 6-furlong test for 3-year-olds in Class C. It was Flinchum's nineteenth score here, and boosted him to within one winner of the veteran Eddie Arcaro, pacemaking veteran who is temporarily on the sidelines with a reported case of flu. Royal Man gained second money by a nose over Domkin.

Washington Gun Club Holds 2 Events Today

The second will be at 25 targets, distance handicap, with contestants' positions determined by their scores in the first 50 targets.

LA JOYA, in the thick of contention all the way, held on gamely in the stretch drive. FLORENCE M. could not get up.

NAUGHTY encountered interference.

LITTLE BOLO shook off repeated challenges from his opposition in the early stages and outlasted DANDY GAL when the real issue came. DANDY GAL worked her way up on the inside, then came to the outside in the stretch and closed gamely. RAISE UP, prominent factor all the way, was easily best of the others. CASINO PETE lacked speed and was never prominent.

LIBERTY QUEEN came around the leaders in the final quarter and, closing strong, wore the leaders down in the last strides. ROYAL MAN, in close attendance of DOMKIN all the way, responded gamely to vigorous pressure and outgamed him in the stretch drive. DOMKIN showed excellent speed, but hung slightly right at the end. BRIGHT VIEW, away slowly, closed a good gap.

125 'Frisco Bookies Lose Telephones

Users Must Prove Lawful Purpose Before Service Is Resumed

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Feb. 2.—Attorney General Earl Warren said today telephone service to 125 San Francisco race track bookmakers would be canceled at 6 p. m.

The network of direct wires was so complex, Warren explained, that his aides and telephone company directors could not discover where the race results and last minute changes on odds were coming from. There seemed to be several centers for distributing the information.

Telephones will be taken out altogether. Warren said, and individual service will be restored by the company only after subscribers satisfy both company management and police, who cooperated in the roundup, they have no intention of resuming the bookmaking business.

The group was in addition to 110 bookmakers cut off last week when phone service was discontinued to four distributing centers.

Telephone, Telegraph Service Denied Bookies

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 2 (AP).—The Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co. said today it would deny service to horse race booking establishments which the city legally declares "public nuisances."

Phoenix officials said a further study of the company's decision would have to be made before they could determine its effectiveness in driving out "bookies" who operate by telephone only.

Christmas Club Accounts Here Average $88.16

Compares With $48.50 Per Capita Throughout The United States

Washington's Christmas Savings Clubs continue to maintain their national high record. While country-wide surveys reveal the average per capita amount subscribed by members enrolled in Christmas Savings Clubs is $48.50,, in Washington, the District of Columbia Bankers Association announces the average amount subscribed this year is $88.16. This year's clubs have also enrolled a total membership of 82,295, a gain of 3,802 over 1939.

The total amount subscribed for 1940 is $7,255,815, representing an increase of $542,680 over last year. Local officials explain that the Christmas Club plan is not a direct source of profit but that the benefits to their customers and business interests of the city justify this popular service. It has also been found that approximately 25 per cent of the total finds its way into permanent savings accounts.

Twohy to Speak in Chicago

"Your Reserve Bank System," will be the subject of an address by James F. Twohy, governor of the Federal Home Loan Bank system, one of the principal speakers at United States Savings and Loan League in Chicago, February 9 and 10. The meeting which is the eighth annual assembly in this region will be attended by 500 savings, building and loan association executives in nine States of that territory.

Mr. Twohy will be on the program Saturday morning, and explain the situation of the Federal Home Loan Bank System after seven years. Other speakers will be Morton Bodfish, Chicago, executive vice president of the United States Savings and Loan League; Fermor S. Cannon, Indianapolis, second vice president of the league, and John F. Scott, St. Paul savings and loan executive.

Plans for the expansion of savings, building and loan associations' mortgage activities this year above the nine-year record reached in 1939 will be made at the conference. Discussion will be held regarding savings clubs through which home owners will accumulate first down payments on their homes through investment channels of a savings and loan association and then borrow the rest of the money needed on mortgages from the same institutions. Attention also will be given to use of life insurance by the borrower to insure his family of clear title to the home in case of death. There will be several talks on selling and development of savings and loan services.

Cotton Futures Gain 35 to 45 Cents Per Bale

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 2.—Cotton futures ran up 7 to 9 points at the start today and coasted along close to those levels the balance of the session. Washington news—or, rather, lack of it—was the biggest cinder in the market eye.

The amount of agricultural parity and subsidy payments will have an effect on 1940 prices, several brokers said. Consequently, operators are cautious until they can see what Congress does to the sums recommended by President Roosevelt.

Higher cables from Bombay prompted the morning gains. Selling was only spasmodic after that and trade buying was sufficient to keep the list on its feet.

Rains in the Western cotton belt were regarded as beneficial to new crop prospects.

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities declined during the week ended yesterday for the fourth successive week, falling off to $17,361,563, compared with $29,767,990 the previous week, and $151,107,200 in the corresponding week last year, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

About 80 per cent of the week's total represented a demand for new money, the remainder consisting of refunding operations.

Wheat Prices Advance With Mill Buying

Floor Operators Also A Factor in Pushing Quotations Higher

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Wheat prices today rose more than a cent a bushel in the best rally of the past week. Buying came from mills and professional traders and to a large extent represented reinstatement of lines sold out on the recent price downturn or covering of previous "short" sellers who were accepting profits ranging from a few cents up to 10 cents or more.

Pit brokers generally regarded the action as technical in view of price losses of 14 to 15 cents since the two-year peaks were reached in December. Reduction of the amount of wheat involved in outstanding contracts recently has improved the market's position from a technical standpoint, they said, removing much weakly-held wheat which fell into relatively strong hands.

Aside from these factors and some purchasing credited to mills in line with reports of increased cash wheat and flour activity, the market also derived support on the basis of several pessimistic private crop reports.

Wheat closed 1 to 1⅞ cents higher than yesterday: May, 97¼ to 97⅛; July, 94⅝ to 94½; corn ¼ to ⅝ up; May, 55¼ to 55⅛; July 55⅛; oats unchanged to ⅝ higher; soy beans, 2 to 2¼ up; rye, ⅛ to ½ up, and lard, 8 to 12 higher.

Jay O'Brien, Polo Star, Seeks Role in Standard Brands

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 2.—Directors of Standard Brands, Inc., today voted a dividend of 10 cents a common share, payable April 1, to stock of record February 16. The same amount was paid January 2. Directors reputedly considered a plan submitted by one of their newest members, Walter G. Dunnington, Wall Street lawyer, concerning management policies and merchandise lines of the company.

Dunnington, elected to the directorate last November, was said to represent the interests of Mr. and Mrs. Jay O'Brien. Mrs. O'Brien was divorced from the late Julius Fleischmann, whose family were influential stockholders in the company.

A spokesman for the management said directors had taken no action altering management personnel, or management policies. Neither has any change been ordered in the merchandise lines or policies.

Mr. O'Brien married Mrs. Dolly Leach Hemingway - Fleischmann after she obtained a Paris divorce from the late "yeast king." The O'Briens now reputedly control one of the largest single blocks of stock in Standard Brands, in which other members of the Fleischmann family are actively interested. The company was formed as a merger of Fleischmann and other properties, under Morgan sponsorship, in 1929.

Wall Street sources said some time ago the O'Brien group insisted on representation on the Standard Brands board of directors, and as a result Mr. Dunnington became a director.

The Fleischmann family interests were already actively represented on the board by Paul W. Fleischmann, of New York, first vice president; Max C. Fleischmann, of Glenbrook, Nev., and Julius Fleischmann, of Cincinnati.

Mr. Dunnington, after looking around from within, was said to have decided that the company was in need of "pepping up." He conferred at length with Mr. O'Brien and they worked out a tentative plan for rejuvenating the operation of the company.

This was communicated to Fleischmann family interests, who were reported quite willing to experiment.

Trading Continues Dull and Narrow; Business News Is Discouraging; Treasury Bonds Continue Advance

New York, Feb. 2.—With evidence accumulating that business has slowed down in several important fields, security markets failed to receive impetus in another dull, mixed and narrow session today. Last prices were but microscopical above Thursday's. Sterling and French francs regained most of their Thursday declines. Wheat turned strong on mill buying and added 1 to 1⅜ cents. Cotton trading here failed to reflect higher markets abroad but active months hardened a little.

Among discouraging business news items were forecasts of a further substantial drop in steel mill operating schedules; the possibility of auto output estimates for February being revised downward; reports of softness in the gasoline price structure and signs a weakness in the Stock Exchange seat price indicator. Arrangements were reported for sale of three seats, at $53,000, $52,000 and $48,000. The latter figure is $11,000 under the price named in the last previous announcement.

Steadiness of steel shares had no relation to the news, except perhaps that announcement of a British order placed here may have brought out a few buyers. Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Birmingham all predicted lower output schedules on steel next week.

Steel Operations

Pittsburgh, it was believed, will end the week at 73 per cent of capacity, off 3 points from Monday's rate. Youngstown at 45 per cent, is off 20 points in the last two weeks and Birmingham, at 86 per cent, shows the first change from a 94 per cent schedule since October last year.

Pivotal motors were not among the most active shares and were for the most part about unchanged. Ward's reported that a sizable increase in field stocks during January has been followed by a sharp curtailment in manufacturing schedules by some companies.

Continental Motors, which has been receiving a play because of its low price and reported activity in aircraft as well as motor branches, led the list on turnover of 48,000 shares at an advance of one-fourth point.

Dun & Bradstreet reported a rise in retail trade and for a time some of the merchandising issues were in request and did well. Rails jogged along about even, announcement that carriers' net income for 1939 was more than $200,000,000 higher than for 1938 being quite in line with estimates.

Cluett, Peabody sold at a new 1939-1940 high in fairly brisk trading on rumblings that the financial showing will be even better than recently forecast. Douglas gained more than a point among air stocks and Glenn Martin retained some of its early advance. Sunshine Mining, American Tobacco B and McCrory preferred were at new tops. International Paper preferred got into the active class with a gain of 1⅝ and Norfolk & Western was up nearly 2. Utilities were steady with United Corporation at a new high. Chemicals were mostly a bit lower. Oils showed minor changes.

Bond Market Holds Firm

New York, Feb. 2.—Small movements again were the rule in the listed bond market today, with advances quite general. United States Treasury bonds and best rated corporate investments were firm. Rails advanced, but foreign dollar obligations were dull. Turnover was $5,220,000.

Brooklyn-Manhattan transit bonds advanced to best levels in several years on unification prospects. Among speculative rails a general upswing developed. Holding company and share privilege issues held firm and movements were minor in amusement, communications and other special groups.

Scandinavian, Belgian and Italian bonds were uncertain. Canadians improved, but other belligerent country bonds drifted downward. Little interest was taken in the Latin-American issues, most of which were fractionally lower.

United States Treasury obligations were marked higher by small fractions, with dealings slow in anticipation of some extensive March refunding. Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds showed more fractional gains than losses.

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—A fast rally in the British pound today nearly cut in half Thursday's sharp drop. The pound closed 1 cent higher in terms of the dollar after sinking almost a cent in morning trade. Foreign money dealers said yesterday's breaks appeared overdone. At the same time, they admitted, buying of the English money by importers has been slackening most of the week. The belga slipped .03 of a cent while the French franc rose .00½ of a cent. The Swiss franc and guilder were unchanged.

Big Board Seats Sink to $48,000

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Memberships on the New York Stock Exchange sank to the lowest price levels since 1918 today. Three were posted for transfer at successively lower prices. The first at $53,000, which was off $6,000 from the last sale. The second at $52,000 and the third at $48,000, only $3,000 above the low of $45,000 established in a sale in 1918.

Brokers have been hard put to make a living lately with daily sales averaging only around 600,000 shares, or a little more than half what it is generally accepted as necessary to pay running expenses.

N.Y. Life Insurance Co. Policies Total $6,830,834,796

New York, Feb. 2.—Noteworthy gains were made by the New York Life Insurance Co. in 1939, according to preliminary figures made public today by Thomas A. Buckner, chairman. Payments to living policyholders and beneficiaries amounted to $210,625,818 in 1939, an increase of about $9,000,000 over the previous year. The payments to policyholders amounted to $130,804,833, and payments to beneficiaries totaled $70,820,785.

New paid for life insurance in 1939 was $427,756,600, an increase of $4,939,100 over 1938. Total insurance in force on December 31, 1939, aggregated $6,830,834,796. This is an increase of $37,008,487 over the close of 1938.

"Payments to policyholders and beneficiaries, new business, and insurance in force reflect the activities of the company's agency force in cities, towns and villages throughout the United States and Canada," said Mr. Buckner. "It is interesting to note that although the company had aproximately 400 fewer agents, the volume of new paid for life insurance increased by almost $5,000,000." The New York Life confines its business to "ordinary" insurance and writes no industrial or "group" insurance.

There was a normal growth of assets during the year, the total assets of the company on December 31, 1939, amounting to $2,762,278,483, an increase of $114,823,771 for the year. Liabilities were $2,636,639,461. Surplus funds reserved for general contingencies were $125,639,022 compared with $124,555,211 at the close of 1938.

United Fruit 1939 Profit $4.86 a Share

Net Earnings Compare With $3.54 Per Share in 1938

Retail Trade 5 to 9 Per Cent Over Year Ago

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 2.—Rising temperatures brought more buyers out of doors this week and retail trade for the Nation perked up, Dun & Bradstreet said today in a survey. Trade volume was estimated 5 to 9 per cent larger than in the corresponding 1939 week.

Activity, said the review, "was especially pronounced in automobiles, household furnishings, and spring apparel, lines which had been most seriously neglected during the severe weather conditions of preceding weeks. Some cities reported an expansion in furniture sales of 20 to 25 per cent over the preceding week.

"An improvement in grocery volumee, which ranks large in total retail trade, helped to widen the gain in sales over a year ago.

"Interest in cold-weather garments declined . . . but spring wear forged ahead strongly.

"The Southwest was the only region to show a decline compared with the preceding year, the drop being estimated at less than 3 per cent."

The annual meeting of the stockholders will be held on February 15 at Schoolfield. The arrears in dividends on the preferred stock amount to $12 per share together with interest at 6 per cent.

Connecticut Bowler Rolls Set of 708

Jack White Leads Invaders in Match At Queen Pin

Washington and New Haven, Conn., bowlers split in their match last night at Queen Pin Alleys, but by far the most brilliant individual performance was turned in by the invaders.

Jack White, star of the Connecticut duo, checked in a 708 set to top all previous set records at Queen Pin, and incidentally, to defeat Frank Mischou in the singles by a total of 69 pins. Mischou's set was 639.

In the doubles White could manage for only a 809 aggregate in six games. He and his partner, Ben Kusky, who rolled 692, were soundly trounced by Washington's Reds King and Red Megaw, 1535 to 1501. Ollie Pacini rolled the first three games for the locals but was forced to retire because of ill health. Megaw led the D. C. delegation with 753.

ARCADIA

Maybelle Hering's 136 game featured the Independent Ladies' League. Mary Fox, of the Razz Berries, took high individual set, 35, and Shah and Shah five took down team honors, 539 and 1,524.

LUCKY STRIKE

Every high on the books was registered by Indian Spring No. 1 team in the Country Club League. It took a pair of games from Kenwood No. 2, and combined for a 637 and 1,709. Bill Colvent won individual honors for the team with 153 and 373.

Sight No. 1 tied the team game record in the Navy Yard League with 628, also scoring an 1,803 set, which was second high of the season. Russ Spilman led the attack with a 390 set. Best individual game was rolled by Torpedo Tube's W. H. Smith, a 163.

X-Rays Reveal O'Brien Has Broken Wrist

St. John's storybook victory over its chief Catholic prep rival, Gonzaga, Friday night, by a 29-to-27 count, was a costly one, it was revealed yesterday.

X-rays of the arm of young Larry O'Brien, first-year forward, revealed a broken right wrist, necessitating his retirement to the sidelines for the remainder of the season.

The little redhead got off the floor after a mix-up in the final period, his arm hanging limp, and said to Coach Gene Augusterfer, "It hurts awful, Gus. I think it must be broken." Preliminary examinations were made last Friday night and the damaged member was put in a cast yesterday.

Augusterfer said the loss of O'Brien would seriously hurt his team's prospects the rest of the year. To date he has alternated with Bill Brogan as the Johnnies' sixth player.

Staunton Beats Md. Frosh as Savage Stars

A sudden let-down on the part of Maryland U.'s freshmen cagers, and a hot streak on the part of Staunton Military Academy's Bob Savage, lost a 43 to 42 decision for the Terp yearlings last night at College Park. Firing from midcourt as the final whistle blew, Savage overcame a 42-to-41 deficit for the Cadets and brought his team out on top after a hectic up-and-down scramble.

In all, Savage tallied 13 points for honors of the game, and though he played throughout the first half, he didn't score a point until the second. He was ably assisted by Forward Patrissi, with 11 points. Dick Floyd and Gordy, of the losers, also had that total.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

William T. Tilden 2d, America's all-time tennis champion, has only one regret in his careers in both the amateur and professional tennis realms. That is that he didn't turn professional years before he did in 1930. Tilden, shown playing backgammon yesterday, thinks tennis is in a bad way tage to 2-0. The Eagles' second point, tallied by Center Covert, was made possible by the Sailors' recklessness in efforts to tie the score.

Port Colborne, using a power formation every time it obtained possession of the puck, left its own goalie devoid of protection. So it was that after a scrimmage in front of the Eagles' net, McKillop shot Covert a pass off the boards and he was away in front of the pack.

Covert outdistanced a lone pursuer in a race to the Sailors' goal and pushed in his shot after a clever feint which drew Goalie Bastien out of position.

Though no penalties were inflicted, this period was far rougher than the first. The Sailors were flinging their sticks with abandon and the Eagles were retaliating with vicious body checking.

Goalie Lee continued his superlative goal tending for Washington, making 8 saves, more than half of them of the spectacular variety, to bring his total for the game to 14.

How an "ACC" Auto Loan Cut My Payments $24 a Month

I WAS PAYING $55 a month on a lot of bills I owed around town. There was $36 on the car, $7.50 on the refrigerator, $11 on our furniture, $5 on a doctor bill, and $5.50 on several small bills.

ALL IN ALL I OWED $270 and those payments were getting me down. I didn't have enough left to LIVE on.

THEN I HEARD about "ACC" Auto Loans. Talked it over with their manager and got a $270 loan on my car and paid off all those bills. On their 12-month plan my payments are now only $30.75 a month, and that leaves me $24 to spend on other things. Matter of fact, I'm putting part of that $24 in the bank!"

YOU, TOO, CAN get an "ACC" Auto Loan on any make car and any model from 1932 to 1940, whether paid for or not. We will cut your payments and advance you the extra cash you need, in 15 minutes.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"Bridge in the suburbs is probably like bridge almost everywhere else," says recently migrated expert Dick Frey. Except that in the suburbs the tempers of partners are milder, their criticisms less biting.

Frey describes today's hand, upon which, though he is a master with enough points to impress the most blase bridge fan, he modestly admits to failure.

"There's something about the country air" he exalts, "that affects us commuters along about 9:30. A little more carbon monoxide in the atmosphere might have caused me to be more careful of this simple little deal, on which I did not make three no-trump.

"West got off to the only possible embarrassing lead, the four of diamonds, but fortunately the suit was blocked. East's ten forced my king, and the only hope was to win three club tricks, so a low club was led to dummy's jack.

"When this held, I foolishly led back to the club king. West took the ace and East's diamond queen won the return. East shifted to a heart and I ran up with the ace, but the clubs didn't split and the contract was defeated.

"North's only comment was sympathetic (thank heaven for the suburbs). At the club I'd have had my head bitten off for not making the proper play—which was, of course, to come back to the spade king and lead another low club. If dummy's queen held that trick, I could play for the split—but West would have had to take his ace, leaving me with both the king and the queen."

WJSV and this paper have cooked up a rather novel and somewhat startling idea for a broadcast this afternoon at 3:45. It will be a play-by-play description of a blood transfusion at Children's Hospital.

There is obviously great misunderstanding about blood transfusions, because there was great horror expressed by all concerned when it was suggested that a broadcast be made of such an operation. However, the Children's Hospital officials readily consented to the broadcast and explained that many transfusions are no more dangerous or trying than a pretty good headache. The particular transfusion that has been arranged for tomorrow will center about a patient who will suffer no inconvenience or embarrassment through the broadcast.

Dr. Joseph S. Wall, chief of the Children's Hospital staff, and Dr. C. Francis Scalessa, chief resident, will participate. John Charles Daly, WJSV's special events announcer, will be at the microphone and not quite so bewildered as might be expected, thanks to a few years in medical school.

The purpose of this broadcast is to bring home the need of support for the WJSV-Post drive to raise funds for blood and serum banks in the Washington hospitals. The broadcast is designed to tell local citizens the functions of such banks.

Fred Allen's "Uncle Jim" is in town for a few days to see his favorite comedian. Uncle Jim's favorite comedian is "Red" Skelton, now falling into the aisles with the Earle customers. The funniest comedian Uncle Jim knows is his boss and lifelong friend, Fred Allen, but Fred's up there and is set for life. Young Skelton, an affable gentleman who defies tradition by being funny offstage, too, is a discovery of "Uncle Jim's," so the kindly veteran came down to Washington after the last Allen broadcast to watch his protege strut his stuff on the Earle stage. We sat through a show with him the other evening to watch Red work and "Uncle Jim" strutted out of that theater as proud as a father after junior had clouted a home run with the bases filled.

THE DRAGON'S TEETH

By ELLERY QUEEN

Chapter 21

BEAU LET himself into the Queen office, switched on the lights, threw open the windows, and took a bottle from a desk drawer.

Ten minutes later there was a knock at the reception door. He put the bottle down and went out.

The knocker was De Carlos, alone.

"Come in," said Beau. He locked the door. "You're early. I've telephoned my partner to come down; he'll be here soon."

"You're partner?" De Carlos did not look pleased.

"Yes. Uh—guy named Beau Brummell—I mean, Rummell. We're like that." Beau rubbed his eyes and led the way to the inner office. "Have a snifter?"

"But I wanted to speak to you privately."

"No secrets between Beau and me," growled Beau. He waved towards the bottle as he lit a cigarette. De Carlos licked his red lips, looking about for a glass. There was none in sight and Beau did not offer one. De Carlos tilted the bottle. Beau watched him cynically. The man drank and drank. When he set the bottle down his gray cheek-bones had turned pink.

He smacked his lips and said: "Now——"

"Not now," said Beau. "Have another."

De Carlos waved gayly. "Don't mind if I do."

DE CARLOS was drunk when Mr. Queen unlocked the front door and entered the inner office.

The bearded man lay sprawled in the "client's chair," waving the bottle and leering glassy-eyed at Beau.

"Ah, the pardner," said De Carlos, trying to rise. He fell back in the chair. "Do, Mis'er Rummell. Lovely night. I mean sad. So sad. Have seat, Mis'er Rummell."

Ellery glanced at Beau, who winked. "This is Mr. Edmund De Carlos, Rummell," said Beau to Ellery in a voice loud enough to pierce the clouds of alcohol on Mr. De Carlos' brain. "One of the trustees of the Cole estate, you know."

"Siddown, Mis'er Rummell," said Mr. De Carlos cordially, waving the bottle. "Pleasure, 'm sure. Siddown."

De Carlos leaned forward confidentially. "Impor'nt an' worth money, Mis'er Rummell. Pots o' money, y'un'erstan'."

"Go on, spill," said Beau.

"We're frien's. We're all frien's here. An' we're men of the worl', hey?" De Carlos giggled. "Know what it's all about. Now I know de—de-tec-tive a'ncies, gen'l'men, an' I know de-tec-tives. Bought—can all be bought. Jus' a madder o' price. I say. Jus' a madder o' price . . . tha'sh all."

"Do I understand that you want to engage us to investigate a case for you, Mr. De Carlos?" asked Ellery.

De Carlos stared at him owlishly, then burst into laughter. "Very good, Mis'er Rummell. I wanna 'ngage you not to inveshtigate a cashe!"

Beau and Ellery exchanged glances. Then Beau said: "You want what?"

De Carlos grew immediately serious. "Now look, Mis'er Queen. Le's shpread cardsh on table, huh? I know you married li'l Kerrie tonight 'caush you wash in a deal wi' Margo. You marry Kerrie, she loshes income from eshtate. Margo gets it, you share with Margo—nishe work, Mis'er Queen, nishe work. But wha' happensh? Your wife goesh and shpoilsh it all. Putsh three bulletsh in Margo. Woof! Margo'sh dead." He wagged his head solemnly. "An then where are you, Mis'er Queen? Holdin' the bag, Mis'er Queen, hey?"

"You can that kind of talk," said Beau in a hard voice. "You might get hurt. You heard the story!"

"Nishe shtory, Mis'er Queen," leered De Carlos, "but it won't go. No, shir, it'sh fan—fantastic. Sure she killed Margo—she'sh guilty ash hell, Mis'er Queen. Whadda you care, anywaysh? Tha'sh not the point. Tha'sh——"

Beau spanned the space between him and De Carlos in a split second. He grabbed De Carlos by the throat.

Ellery said: "Hold it, Brains," and Beau relaxed his grip sheepishly. De Carlos stared up at him, frightened.

"No sense in going off half-cocked," said Ellery smoothly. "You'll have to excuse my partner, Mr. De Carlos. He's had a trying night."

"Got no call shtrangling people," muttered De Carlos, feeling his Adam's-apple.

"You were about to say?"

De Carlos struggled out of the chair, eyeing Beau warily. "You gen'l'men been jockeyed out of a lot o' money by Kerrie—by shome one killing Margo." He shook his forefinger at Ellery. "'S a shame, I shay. Y'oughta be recom-recompenshed, I shay. An' Edmund De Carlos's the man to do it! Good frien's, huh? I make it up to you, huh?"

"HUH," said Beau. "The piece of cheese. And we're the rats. I didn't get it, and still don't. What's the gag, Blackbeard?"

"No gag, gen'l'men! Oh, coursh if I do somethin' for you, you gotta do somethin' for me. Tha'sh on'y fair, hey?" He peered anxiously at them. "Hey?"

"Hey, hey," said Ellery, with a warning glance at Beau. "I should say. Now, as I understand it, you're worried over our loss in the Margo deal, and you'd like to make it up to us financially. In return for your litle contribution to our agency account you want us to do something for you in return. And what might that be, Mr. De Carlos?"

De Carlos beamed. "'S a pleasure to do business with you, Mis'er Rummell. Why, you gotta do nothin', shee. Tha'sh what I said before. I'm paying you not to investigate a cashe! You step out. Way, way out. You forget you ever heard of Cadmus Cole, or the Cole eshtate, or—or anything. Shee what I mean?"

Beau growled deep in his throat, but Ellery rose quickly and came forward to step between the two men. He kicked Beau's shin not gently with his left heel and took De Carlos' arm.

"I think we understand, Mr. De Carlos," he said with a leer to match their visitor's. "You feel we've been snooping about a bit too freely, and you'd breathe more easily if we directed our agency energies elsewhere. How much did you say our stepping out was worth to you?"

"I didn't shay." De Carlos peered at him with a bleary shrewdness. "Shall we say—$10,000?"

"Come, come, Mr. De Carlos. We'd have made a good deal more than that in the Margo Cole deal."

"De Carlos-boy'sh bein held up, held up." De Carlos grunted. "Now don' hol' me up, genle'men. Fifteen."

"Now you're bruising my feelings, Mr. De Carlos."

"Aw ri'," grumbled De Carlos, "shall we shay twen'y thoushand?"

"Shall we rather say twenty-five, Mr. De Carlos?"

De Carlos muttered to himself. Finally he growled: "'S a deal. Twen'y-fi' thoushand. Robbersh!"

"Just business," Ellery assured him. "Now how is this little payment to be made? Cash, I trust?"

"Cash! I don't carry that mush cash aroun' with me," said De Carlos irritably. "Give you a sheck."

"Checks bounce," reflected Mr. Queen.

"Well, thish one won't! An' if it doesh, you're protected. You don't have to go through with our 'greement."

"Before that logic we bow. A check it shall be. Chair, Mr. De Carlos?"

He helped the reeling man around the desk and sat him down in the swivel chair, reaching over to switch on the powerful desk lamp.

De Carlos fumbled in his clothes and brought out a checkbook. He opened it, stared at the last stub morosely, then groped in his pockets again. Finally his hand emerged with a fountain pen.

He unscrewed the cap, pushed it onto the other end of the pen, leaned over and, tucking his tongue in one cheek, began laboriously to write out a check.

If he had taken a bomb from his pocket Mr. Queen and Mr. Rummell could not have been so startled.

Their eyes fixed in a fascinated amazement at the pen in De Carlos's lax, blundering fingers.

It was a black hard-rubber fountain pen, fat and scarred, and it was trimmed in gold.

On the cap, etching-sharp in the bold light of the lamp, there were certain curious scratchy marks and dents in an arched pattern—a familiar pattern, a pattern Messrs. Queen and Rummell had seen twice before . . . once earlier that evening in Room 1726 at the Villanoy on the pencil they had found behind the radiator, and once months before in that very office, at that very desk.

The identical pen.

It was Cadmus Cole's fountain pen!

CADMUS COLE'S fountain pen! What was it doing in De Carlos's possession?

Ellery raised his eyebrows at Beau. They drifted off to a corner of the office as De Carlos, at the desk, struggled to control his hand.

"Positive, although we've always got a check-up against those microphotographs."

"Cole's pen!" mumbled Beau. "The same pen he used to write out that check for fifteen grand when he originally hired us. It might have a simple explanation. El. Maybe De Carlos just appropriated it after Cole cashed in."

Ellery shrugged. "There's one way of finding out. De Carlos is just drunk enough to be off guard, and if we asked him he's apt to tell the truth. Let me handle this."

He went back to the desk and rested his palms on it, smiling down at the writing man.

"There!" said De Carlos with a bubbly sigh. "Twen'y-fi' thousand dollarsh, Mis'er Rummell." He sat back limply in the swivel chair, waving the check like a flag to dry the ink. "Shay! How'd I know you'll keep your wor', gen'l'men?"

"You don't," replied Ellery with a smile.

"You double-crosh me," said De Carlos furiously, reeling to his feet, "an' I'll—I'll——"

Ellery took the check gently from the man's slack fingers. "Is that friendly? We're a reputable agency, Mr. De Carlos. Word's our bond. Yes, twenty-five thousand, signed Edmund De Carlos——correct, Mr. De Carlos, and thank you!"

"'S all ri'," said De Carlos, forgetting his suspicions and trying to bow. He almost fell on his face. Beau caught him and straightened him up none too carefully. "Thanksh, Mis'er Queen. 'S mighty rocky weather we're having. An' now I'll be on my way."

He put the black fountain pen back into his pocket. Beau watched it disappear with the expression of a fox watching a rabbit vanish in a hole.

Ellery grasped De Carlos' other arm and he and Beau began to steer the bearded man to the door.

"By the way, Mr. De Carlos," said Ellery respectfully, "you're just the man to help me out."

De Carlos stopped short, weaving. "Yesh?" he said, blinking at Ellery.

"Mr. De Carlos, I have a hobby—you know, hobby? I collect little personal mementoes of famous people. Not expensive things, you know—the homelier and more personal the better I like them."

"I like t' collect the ladies, bless 'em," chuckled De Carlos. "Blon's, brunettes—any kind, I shay, 's long's they're beau'ful."

"EVERY MAN to his own hobby," smiled Ellery. "Well, I've often thought no collection of the sort I own would be complete without some memento of Mr. Cadmus Cole."

"Should think sho," said De Carlos warmly. "Great man, Mis'er Cole. Great man. Gen'l'men, give you Mis'er Cole!"

"I meant to ask him for some little thing when he hired us a few months ago, but he was in such a hurry that I thought I'd wait for a more propitious time. And then," Ellery sighed, "he passed on, and I'd missed my chance. Do you think you could help me out, Mr. De Carlos? I mean, you were probably the closest friend he had."

"On'y frien'," said De Carlos. "Give you my wor.' On'y frien' he had in the worl.' Lemme think. Le' shee. Pershonal——"

"What happened to his personal belongings after his death, Mr. De Carlos—his clothing, fob, studs, things like that? Anything of that nature, you see——"

"Oh, they were all packed in a bunsh o' trunksh, an' I shipped 'em North from Cuba," said De Carlos, waving his hand. "They're in the house in Tarrytown ri' now, Mis'er Rummell. I'll shee what I can fin'——"

"I shouldn't want to put you to all that trouble. Didn't he give you anything before he died? Or perhaps you took something from his effects to remember him by—his watch, his ring, his fountain-pen, something like that?"

"Di'n' take a thing," said Mr. De Carlos sadly. "Honesht shteward—tha'sh Edmund De Carlos, gen'l'men. Give you my wor.' Di'n' take so mush as a shteel pin!"

"Oh, come," protested Mr. Queen. "You must have taken something, Mr. De Carlos. Some little thing. His fountain-pen, for instance. Didn't you take that?"

"I beg your par'on," said De Carlos, offended. "Di'n' take his fou'n-pen, di'n' take anything!"

"Such epic honesty," said Mr. Queen with a gleam in his eye, "deserves a substantial reward." He snatched off Mr. De Carlos' spectacles suddenly, leaving the man blinking.

"Mis'er Rummell . . ." began De Carlos with a gurgle.

Ellery waved the silver spectacles at Beau. "Give the gentleman his reward."

"Huh?" said Beau.

"Mr. Queen," said Mr. Queen, "the floor is yours. I suggest you stretch Mr. Edmund De Carlos out on it."

Beau's mouth closed. "It would be sort of taking advantage, wouldn't it? He'd fall apart."

Judge Weighs Right to Try Man Arrested At Home on Drunk Charge—Without Warrant

Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey took under advisement late yesterday a question of whether the court has jurisdiction to try a case where a man was arrested in his own home on a charge of drunkenness by police who had no warrant.

The plea was presented to the court by attorneys for Bart Clines, 40-year-old lawyer, who was arrested January 27 in his home at 1841 North Capitol street. Patrolmen who arrested Clines testified that they went to his home in response to a radio call that someone was breaking in.

Both policemen, Privates Eugene Ware and Frank J. Behnke, told the court they found Clines alone at the house and took him to the Twelfth Precinct station and booked him for intoxication. He was released under $100 bail.

Information filed by the Corporation Counsel's office charged Clines with being drunk both in his house and on North Capitol street.

Levi H. David and William Sullivan, defense attorneys, argued before Judge Casey yesterday that under the Constitution no person may be arrested legally in the case of a misdemeanor unless there is a warrant or the offense is committed in the arresting officer's sight.

Korman, assistant corporation counsel, who prosecuted the case, that was illegal, as long as Clines was charged before the court that body had jurisdiction. He further contended that police had authority to enter the home believing a felony had been committed.

Judge Casey advised counsel on both sides to prepare briefs containing decisions in previous cases involving jurisdiction and file them with the court next week.
